Premiers shy over Trudeau tax offer

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau offered the provinces a financial arrangement Monday that he called "a new form of federalism," but the provincial premiers greeted it warily.

The proposal, the latest in 40 years of haggling over taxing and spending powers, is to make more room for the provinces to levy taxes while winding down direct Ottawa payments to shared-cost programs for health care and post-secondary education.

The leaders argued for three hours about equalization — a system expiring by law next March whereby Ottawa grants money to seven poorer provinces to increase their income to an agreed per-capita average. No agreement was reached on a replacement program, but they decided to take up the subject at a scheduled two-hour windup session of the full conference at 9:30 a.m. EDT today.

At the evening meeting, over a roast-lamb dinner, and afterwards, the premiers reported little progress among themselves on long-standing proposals for constitutional reform, but said it will be discussed again late this summer.

The provinces split along rich-poor lines, with Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia generally supporting the idea of more taxing power in place of federal-provincial dollar-matching for public services, while the other provinces worried about losing money on the deal.

The provinces were unanimous, however, in opposing a federal plan to end a five-year-old system of money transfers from Ottawa, known as revenue guarantees, to make up for any shortfall resulting from the 1971 overhaul of income-tax laws.

"A deal is a deal," said Ontario Premier William Davis in opposing retroactive withdrawal of the revenue-guarantee arrangement.

After 6½ hours in closed, full-dress conference, the premiers met in a working dinner session without aides at 24 Sussex Drive, the prime minister's residence, to talk casually about the continuing question of constitutional reform and the federal anti-inflation program.

Premier Frank Moores of Newfoundland headed home early, but John Crosby, his energy minister, sat in at the dinner.

Before the dinner, participants said they expected to wind up all matters of business during the dinner session. The conference was originally expected to last two days.

Finance ministers are to take up the issues of taxing powers, shared-cost programs and revenue guarantees in detail next month.

Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia said before the dinner that Ottawa "stonewalled the discussion" on reform of federal-provincial financial arrangements, which have been a perennial, active feature of Confederation since the 1930s.

But Trudeau said the aim is "a new form of federalism so the provinces can tax to meet their own needs."

This freedom to tax and spend according to their own priorities, instead of being constrained by the demands of federal-provincial programs in which costs are shared dollar for dollar, has been requested by some of the provinces, he said.

"We're saying: 'You do the taxing—you'll get the thanks for the money you spend and you'll get the blame for the taxes you raise'," said Trudeau.

After opening statements at the economic conference, several premiers told reporters

Stranded drivers attacked

CHICAGO (AP) — A motorist stranded on a dark, rain-soaked South Side street refused to pay $10 demanded by four youths, who then shot him and killed his wife. Police said the attack was one of a series of assaults on motorists stranded by torrential rains.

Three of the couple's six children watched the attack, which police said occurred in darkness Sunday night after heavy rains detoured motorists from the Dan Ryan expressway to unfamiliar streets on the South Side.

"That's the way it is down there," said Joseph DiLeonardi, city homicide commander. He said the youths were trying to "find a chance to stick somebody up."

There were reports of as many as 15 scattered attacks, but DiLeonardi said reports were filed only in four of the incidents involving 17 persons. Three persons were in hospital, one in serious condition.

There were no arrests and police said they could not estimate the number of youths involved in the series of attacks.

The slain woman was identified as Mrs. Phyllis Ann Anderson, 51, of Buffalo Grove — a northwest suburb. Her husband, Leo — editor of Telephony, a magazine for the communications industry — required surgery for his gunshot wounds and was listed in serious condition under intensive care. The three children in the car required treatment for cuts from broken glass.

Edward Rosen, 35, of Schererville, Ind., and his wife Judith had stopped in traffic when youths approached and demanded money.

When he refused, the youths struck him in the side of the face with an undetermined object and dragged him from his car. He was in fair condition with cuts and a broken jaw.

Premier laments changing scene

Happy times gone

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island, senior of the 11 government leaders in the country, says federal-provincial first ministers' conferences are not what they used to be.

B.C.'s Premier Bennett, junior member of the group with only six months at the job, says he is glad things are not as they used to be when his colorful father, W. A. C. Bennett, had a seat at the table.

"They're more like board of directors meetings now," says Campbell, 42, the man who has represented the island province for 10 years. "Before, they were a rather occasional and happy gathering."

"A board of directors' approach is necessary because we're running the country," says Bennett, 44, premier since Dec. 11.

"There has to be mutual trust on both sides. After all, we're working for the same taxpayers."

Campbell says conferences of a decade ago, involving such former premiers as Joey Smallwood of Newfoundland, Bennett and Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, used to have more of "a sense of occasion."

"One looked forward to getting away and getting together," he says. "They were rare events then."

NDP chief takes seat

Cheers and humor welcome Barrett

David Barrett (NDP—Vancouver East) was escorted to his seat in the Legislature Monday by Alex Macdonald, also Vancouver East, and William King (NDP-Revelstoke.)

The public galleries erupted in applause as Barrett was taken to stand before the ceremonial mace to be officially welcomed to the house by Speaker Ed Smith.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy welcomed Barrett on behalf of Premier Bennett, in Ottawa for a first ministers' conference. King replied that he was gratified to find such a warm welcome from the government ranks which will "be in no way dissipated as the weeks roll by."

Liberal Gordon Gibson added his welcome with a touch of humor regarding former premier Barrett's "narrow" victory in the Vancouver-East byelection, a byelection won with more than 70 per cent of the popular vote.

And Conservative Scott Wallace congratulated Barrett on his "tremendous victory — it is vital that this house have a strong opposition."

Barrett thanked the house for the kind welcome and made one request: "When I give my maiden speech I ask that there be no heckling."

As the house chuckled Smith added a rare touch of humor with: "So ordered."

Last week in Penticton, Barrett said he intended to listen to his colleagues for a few days before taking part in debates.

Barrett was personally defeated in his former Coquitlam riding in the Dec. 11 provincial election.

'Go to hell,' Teamster boss tells would-be reformers

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Teamster president Frank Fitzsimmons told 2,300 delegates to the union convention Monday that those who want to reform the union should "go to hell."

Fitzsimmons' opening remarks to the 21st Teamster convention were directed almost entirely at dissidents and reporters who recently have printed allegations of corruption in the 2-million member union. He accused them of trying to "destroy" the Teamsters union.

"For those who say it is time we reform this union, who say it is time for the officers to stop selling out the members, I say to them — go to hell," Fitzsimmons declared.

"I will never allow any of those infiltrators into this organization until you, the delegates to this international union, by majority vote, vote to allow those who would destroy this organization to come into a place of prominence."

The Teamsters union has been under increased scrutiny in recent months by reformers, congressional investigators and federal agents exploring charges of financial corruption and the still unsolved disappearance of the teamsters ex-boss Jimmy Hoffa.

Labor Secretary W. J. Usery, who followed Fitzsimmons to the podium, was criticized by union reformers for appearing to put his "stamp of approval" on the union convention while the union is under investigation by the labor department for alleged pension fund abuses.

Rhodesia promoting blacks to officers

● Rhodesian guerrillas slay another white. Page 20.

SALISBURY (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith announced plans Monday to advance blacks to officer rank in the armed forces of racially troubled Rhodesia.

Smith, speaking on the eve of a government report on race discrimination in his white-minority-ruled country, also said greater promotion prospects will be opened for blacks in the police force.

"This will cater for selected long-serving members in the ranks who have demonstrated marked qualities of leadership, professional ability and loyalty," Smith said in a radio and television broadcast.

Democrat harmony predicted by Carter

United Press International

His delegate count growing by the hour, Jimmy Carter said Monday that the Democratic Party would enter the 1976 presidential campaign with "a harmonious party" for the first time in a decade.

Carter expressed confidence that the nomination was his, but assured a fundraising dinner in Dallas that the party "came out of the many primaries unscathed.

"I don't believe there are any open wounds left," he said. "We will arrive at the national convention with a harmonious party."

Carter stopped in Dallas enroute home to Georgia from New York city where he received an enthusiastic reception from the 274-member New York delegation.

Caucuses and state delegation meetings assured Carter of large blocs of delegates from New York, Connecticut and Missouri. Senator Frank Church released his 74 delegates and endorsed Carter, and Morris Udall said his delegates were free to back the Democratic frontrunner.

The latest UPI nationwide survey gave Carter 1,381 assured votes, just 124 short of the number needed for the Democratic nomination.

In the tight Republican contest, President Ford's aides said he would win enough delegates in upcoming conventions in Iowa, Minnesota, Connecticut and Delaware for a "commanding lead" over Ronald Reagan going into the GOP convention.

But the Ford campaign conceded Reagan would win most of the 31 delegates in Colorado, and the 38 in Washington, and said North Dakota's 18 were "up for grabs."

Ford spokesman Peter Kaye said "we are reasonably confident" of Ford defeating Reagan for the nomination.

Ford has 984 delegates to 884 for Reagan, with 1,130 needed to nominate. There are 258 delegates yet to be picked, and with the struggle for the nomination going down to the wire, both Ford and Reagan actively wooed the 133 uncommitted GOP delegates.

With Carter assured of the nomination, there was wide speculation on his vice-presidential choice. Church said he had "no expectations one way or the other" on getting the nod, while Udall ruled himself out as a possibility.

"I think we have now approached the point where the outcome of our convention is fairly certain," Carter told the New York delegates. "In the presence of a very likely first ballot nomination, we must move to ensure party unity."

Carter gives victory sign

'I will never lie'

Jimmy: Charming, courteous —and difficult to understand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clearly, Jimmy Carter is the most infuriating candidate for president in years.

He came out of nowhere and now, 17 months later, stands at the brink of the Democratic nomination.

He is not easily understood and is impossible to pigeonhole. He is a white farmer from Georgia, who wins black votes north and south, a man whose father couldn't abide racial integration, whose mother could and did, loudly and publicly. He is a product of a tiny, claustrophobic town, with a single one-block business street.

He is a politician with the temerity, or the naivete, to say "I will never lie" to a country at the nadir of its trust. He is a highly intelligent man sophisticated in the ways of politics and image-making who says, nonetheless, when asked, that he was "born again in Christ." He is a Southerner, who may at last bury the Civil War, an intellectual, a liberal in many things, which makes him, according to one nasty view of Dixie, a minority within a minority within a minority.

He is the son of a compelling woman who joined the U.S. Peace Corps at the age of 67. He is a deeply religious Baptist, who still teaches Sunday school with Secret Service men in attendance, a Baptist whose beer-drinking brother goes to church only under forced draft, whose sister is an evangelist and faithhealer with a master's degree in psychology, whose second sister paints, rides a motorcycle and moves about with a free spirit in Plains, Ga., population 648.

James Earl Carter, Jr., insists on being called Jimmy, which is a misleading invitation to intimacy. He is not, off the platform, a man who invites that. He is charming, courteous, attentive and responsive but there is a circle within that remains curtained.

People who find mystery in Jimmy Carter mystify him. He does not shrink from questions and, to a recent interviewer who apologized for trying to probe the inner man, he said, "Help yourself."

"I am very careful about what I say," he said. "And I try to tell exactly what I think and I haven't tried to withhold anything."

"You don't regard yourself as particularly complicated?"

"No, I really don't. But I do have people come up to me and say I don't understand how you can like classic music and Dylan Thomas and Reinhold Neibuhr and also Bob Dylan, the Alman they wanted detailed cost-sharing figures from Ottawa along with guarantees against any net loss in provincial revenues before endorsing a federal plan to reshape the joint financing of medical care, hospital insurance and post-secondary education.

"None of us will commit ourselves until we see what the figures are," Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed told reporters during a break in the meeting.

In position papers distributed outside the meeting and in corridor interviews, the premiers cast doubt on Ottawa's hopes for an agreement.

There was also evidence of a split between the three richest provinces and at least some of the poorer provinces over the proposal for shifts in taxing power.

Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia premiers said they were happy with the aims of the Trudeau plan.

"The principle of the federal government disentangling itself from these three fields is something Ontario has been urging for years," Davis said. Premier William Davis said. "I can't say what the financial implications will be."

Premier Alexander Campbell of Prince Edward Island told reporters the opening round of statements produced "general, but qualified endorsation of the basic objectives outlined by Ottawa."

However, P.E.I. and other poorer provinces expressed concern about whether they could afford health, university and welfare costs under the proposed federal changes, he said.

B.C. Premier William Bennett called for a new philosophy of federal-provincial revenue sharing — taking into account the financial burdens on a province as well as its affluence.

As a rich province, B.C. supports poorer provinces through equalization payments. But the existing system does not take into account B.C.'s high population growth and high costs for health and education facilities, he said.

Six-wheelers finish 1-2

ANDERSTORP, Sweden (AP) — Jody Scheckter of South Africa and Patrick Depailler of France ended Ferrari's winning streak in Formula 1 auto racing this season with a one-two finish Sunday in their Tyrrell six-wheelers at the Swedish Grand Prix. It was the first victory in Grand Prix racing for Ken Tyrrell's six-wheelers, only a month after their debut in Belgium, and a repeat performance of the 1974 triumph, when the two Tyrrell drivers swept to victory in conventional four-wheelers here. That was Scheckter's first Grand Prix win.

Syria takes Palestinian post

BEIRUT (UPI) — Syria, escalating its war in Lebanon on two fronts, sent tanks and troops rumbling across the snow-patched southern mountains Monday to capture a key Palestinian outpost only 10 miles from the Israeli-held Golan Heights.

Leftist and rightist sources also reported new Syrian armor and artillery attacks at Sofar. In the mountains 15 miles east of Beirut. Western newsmen said Syria appeared to be stockpiling a new supply of tanks and fieldguns in the region.

"There are so many tanks it looks like a parking lot," one newsman said.

Damascus radio reported "military manoeuvers" by the Elite "defense brigades" — Syrian President Hafez Assad's "palace guard" of shock troops commanded by his younger brother, Lt. Col. Riffaat Assad.

Responding to the Syrian buildup, Lebanese leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt appealed for Arab troops to "save us from falling into Syria's hands."

He said he would ask Iraq, Tunisia, Libya and Algeria to land airborne or seaborne troops "to defend the Palestinian revolution and the leftist movement."

Bagdhad radio announced more Iraqi troops "have been dispatched today to take up new positions in the performance of their national duty," an indication Bagdhad was moving more forces to beef up the 8,000 soldiers already massed on the Syrian border.

Syrian troops and tanks Monday drove south through the snowy crags of Mt. Hermon in southeastern Lebanon to capture Rachaya, a Palestinian strongpoint only 10 miles from the Golan Heights.

Syria's latest thrust came only hours after the breakdown of Lybian-mediated peace talks. A two-day-old truce in Beirut collapsed in fighting that claimed at least 70 dead and 105 wounded in the past 24 hours.

A Syrian armored column advanced south from the eastern Afkaa valley into the lower Arkour region overnight and captured the main leftist military barracks at Rachaya near the western slopes of Mt. Hermon, 38 miles southeast of Beirut, according to a military communique issued by the joint Palestinian-Lebanese leftist command.

(In Tel Aviv, Israeli sources said Syrian tanks had moved to within 14 miles of the Israeli border.)

Western defence sources monitoring Syrian moves confirmed the southward thrust but said they had no details on the fighting which the Palestinian-leftist command described as fierce.

"The command of the invading Syrian army sent battalions of tanks and infantry into the Arkour (southern) region of Lebanon and succeeded in occupying the Rachaya barracks after several attempts overnight that were repelled. They are now setting up other positions nearby to control the region," the communique said.

Jumblatt met with Arab ambassadors in Beirut and said afterwards he had asked their governments to break the Syrian supply blockade on Lebanon's major ports of Beirut, Sidon and Tripoli with an immediate airlift or sea convoy of food.

Arabs supporting peace force plan

CAIRO (UPI) — The Arab League is trying to overcome Christian rightist opposition to a joint Arab peacekeeping force in Lebanon and has warned Israel against military reaction to such a unit, reports from Damascus said Monday.

Mahmoud Riad of Egypt, secretary general of the 20-nation league, discussed the Arab diplomacy and the warning to Israel with reporters in Damascus Sunday night. His remarks were carried Monday by Egypt's Middle East news agency.

Riad, in Damascus to oversee establishments of the joint Arab force in accordance with a decison last week by Arab foreign ministers, said the principal difficulty lay in "lack of communication" with the Lebanese government of President Sulfiman Franjifh, who opposes the Arab force.

Riad said he had written to Franjifh "assuring him that the Arab force will not take sides with any party in Lebanon and that its presence will be subject to the consent of the Lebanese president."

Riad was asked whether Israel would tolerate the force in Lebanon.

"Israel has nothing to do with this," Riad said. "The Arab league mission is to restore security and peace in Lebanon with the consent of its legitimate authorities. Any Israeli move or aggression using this as a pretext will be confronted by all the Arabs."

Healing Substance...
Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch
Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.
A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.
One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.
And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.
In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.
Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

brothers, the Marshal Tucker band and Charlie Daniels. I can't explain why I like different kinds of music or different kinds of literature or why I memorize certain poems and don't memorize others. I can't explain it but that doesn't make me mysterious."

"Is there any part of the presidency that awes or frightens you?"

"No, I don't think so. The complexity of it is something that I recognize, and that appeals to my interest in organizing meticulous things, in long-range planning, co-ordination and management. I guess that comes from an engineering and scientific background."

"Have you ever been sorry you said, I'll never tell a lie?"

"No. I've been surprised that it aroses any interest . . . I never thought about it being controversial, and I don't have any regrets. No. There's been a great scurrying around, trying to go back to 1960, 1961, when I first got involved in politics, to look up old clippings to see if I still say the same things now that I did 15 years ago. And I've emerged fairly well unscathed, I think."

Watergate behind them, reporters began digging furiously. As of this writing, it seems fair to say that nobody has yet found anything with which to hang Carter. It also seems fair to say, on the evidence, that he has not been above coaxing, pushing or, at least, nudging the facts.

The record does not document the savings which Carter claims he made as governor of Georgia from 1970-74 through reorganization; opinion is divided among state officials over the efficiency it brought; and the question of whether he reduced the number of state agencies from 300 to 22, as he claims, seems lost in the fuzz of who's doing the counting and by what definition.

In any case, many people in Georgia believe Carter gave them an honest, progressive administration, free of corruption, distinguished in its appointments, enlightened in its social programs, and effective in its environmental and consumer protection act.

Police probe starting into corruption claim

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Solicitor-General Fernand Lalonde ordered a police investigation Monday into allegations by a veteran Crown prosecutor that widespread corruption is plaguing Montreal's Palais de Justice.

Lalonde also announced that Bernard Fournier, who made the allegations in a June 11 letter to members of the Quebec national assembly, has been suspended pending the Quebec Provincial Police inquiry.

Details of the allegations were not disclosed. Telephoned at his Montreal home Monday night, Fournier refused any comment on the affair.

In his letter, Fournier wrote that "corruption at the Palais de Justice in Montreal has reached its limit."

Fournier called for the immediate resignation of Chief Crown prosecutor Gerard Girouard who, the letter said, holds key members of the Quebec justice department "in his hands like so many puppets."

Fournier also demanded to address a special sitting of the national assembly to elaborate on the allegations.

In his announcement Lalonde said the language used in Fournier's letter was "not foreign to his behavior."

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been taking gymnastic lessons for two months. I pulled a ligament in my leg doing the splits. It has never healed, and I can't do the splits now without this terrible pain.

I need to know how to do the splits if I want to make cheerleading next year, and tryouts are coming up soon. Is there enything or anywhere to heal it? — Miss J. D.

Let's hope you only pulled a muscle and didn't tear a ligament. Ligaments are usually powerful enough to withstand any reasonable force exerted against them. Perhaps doing the splits doesn't fall into the category of "reasonable force."

If this exercise is done at all it must be with caution and correct technique.

You should be examined, especially if the area is sore to the touch. And for heaven's sake, don't try any more splits until the soreness subsidies. Such muscle injuries usually heal with time. Appropriate exercise, short of pain, should eventually get you back into shape. You can't rush the reconditioning process.

Your future "splits" career will depend on how sensibly you work up to the type of strenuous activity the next time.

I'm not a great fan of this exercise unless done under expert supervision. Remember that some of the muscles involved are notoriously weak to begin with — those in the groin.

I hope that some day budding cheerleaders will be allowed to find some more practical method of showing their enthusiasm.

Couple saved from brink

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — A Minneapolis couple was rescued from a drifting cabin cruiser Monday about a quarter of a mile from the brink of Niagara Falls.

Police said David Matteson, 35, and his wife, Mary Ellen, had drifted "about as close to the falls as you can get and come out alive and talk about it."

Provincial universities

Ottawa after influence

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government emphasized Monday it wanted a bigger say in how the provinces ran their universities and other post-secondary educational institutions.

At the closed federal-provincial economic conference, Ottawa pressed for establishment of a permanent forum of federal and provincial cabinet ministers to meet regularly and discuss what Prime Minister Trudeau described as "common objectives" for higher education.

Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner, federal minister responsible for annual post-secondary education payments of $1.5 billion to the provinces, said outside the meeting that the idea was greeted cautiously by the premiers, who wanted to retain provincial constitutional control over education.

Faulkner said federal authorities were careful at the meeting to present the proposal not as a federal intrusion into provincial territory, "but as a forum for discussion of problems that concern us all."

There was no threat of financial retribution if the provinces refused to accept the idea, he said, "but we said we would expect there would be some response to our concerns."

Specifically, Ottawa wants the proposed forum to explore three current problem areas: Better guarantees of access to higher education, including the rights of students in one province to attend university in another; improved programs to promote bilingualism in education, and more comprehensive courses in Canadian studies.

Ottawa now pays 50 per cent of post-secondary education costs in a program that is costing about 15 per cent more each year. Total spending is expected to reach $1.5 billion this year, up from $1.3 billion last year and $1.1 billion in 1974.

Faulkner said some premiers tried to deflect the proposal by saying post-secondary education was regularly discussed by the existing council of provincial ministers of education.

Ottawa rejected an attempt to allow federal participation on the council with observer status and chose instead a full voice in a new federal-provincial forum, he said.

Faulkner, who argued the federal case before the premiers, said he would visit all provincial education ministers during the next month to further explain the proposal and seek firm commitments on establishment of the forum.

Town rallies from deluge

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) Cleanup operations in this southeastern Saskatchewan community continued Monday after one of the heaviest rainstorms in the city's history, but the situation was under control, an emergency measures organization spokesman said.

More than 130 millimetres (5.15 inches) of rain fell in the area during the weekend, taxing the city's sewage lift station to the limit. The rains stopped Sunday and the system was operating normally Monday, a spokesman said.

The water flooded basements and made street travel close to impossible.

Grieving mother feels sorry for son's killer

EDMONDON (CP) — Grieving for her dead child, an Edmonton mother finds time to express compassion for the seven-year-old boy charged in connection with her son's death.

Mrs. Liz Templar, 25, said she "felt sick" when police told her a neighborhood boy had been charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment in connection with the death of two and one-half-year-old Christopher Templar.

"I thought it was a shame," Mrs. Templar said. "I would rather it had been an accident."

Her son's body was found by police scuba divers Friday night in a pond at the bottom of a ravine near his home after a search which began when the child disappeared during a family barbecue Thursday night.

Mrs. Templar said she had asked police to tell the other boy's mother "We had no hard feelings. It must be awfully hard on his mother. It's hard enough for us — Chrissie was our pride and joy."

Mrs. Templar suffers from multiple sclerosis and doctors have told her she may not be able to have more children. But she said her two-month old daughter Christy and her strong religious beliefs are helping her accept the loss of her son.

"I'm glad in a way that it happened to us, and not to someone who had nothing to fall back on."

Tornado's trail of ruin

Chicago suburb of Lemont looks like bombed-out section of Berlin in wake of tornado, one of scores that tore through the U.S. midwest Monday. Four persons were killed and another 45 injured in the storms, among most widespread and devastating in U.S. history. In Lemont, three-square-mile area was laid waste, with trees stripped of foliage and lumber strewn around like matchsticks. Village of Jordan, Iowa, was virtually wiped off map.

Smoking. What are you going to do about it?

If you've given up smoking more times than you'd like to remember, the chances are you enjoy it so much you don't want to give it up at all.

The question is, what are you going to do about it?

You've probably tried cigarettes that promise extra mildness and found yourself checking every once in a while to see if they were still lit Which brought you right back to your regular brand.

Now, there is Vantage.

Vantage gives you the taste you want. The full, rich flavour of Virginia tobaccos. But here's the big difference. Only Vantage has the specially designed filter that gives you so much of what you want in a cigarette with a lot less of what you don't want.

Vantage is not a heavy drag cigarette. You don't have to work hard getting the smoke through so that all the joy of smoking is lost.

Rich taste and easy draw. Good reasons for any thoughtful smoker to consider the new cigarette called Vantage.

We suggest you try a pack.

Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked—avoid inhaling. 11 mg. "tar" 0.8 mg. nicotine.

'Without law there is no liberty'

"PARLIAMENT CANNOT OFFER YOU anything more precious than the Great Charter of King John."

Britain's Prime Minister James Callaghan was speaking on the occasion of the presentation to an American delegation in London of a gold facsimile of Magna Carta, recognized as the foundation of the basic liberties set forth in the United States' Declaration of Independence.

The gift was in recognition of the United States' bicentennial year, and was received with reverence. But it also symbolized the warmth of feeling that has developed over the years since the bitterness of 1776. And in its acceptance the United States was expressing appreciation of the immense contribution Britain has made to the evolution of the democratic system and the protection of the rights of all.

In the circumstances, Donald Munro, Conservative member for Esquimalt-Saanich, chose a particularly appropriate time to introduce in the Canadian Parliament Bill C-435 which would establish June 15 as Magna Carta Day in this country, to be marked "especially in our schools, with special memorial services and celebrations."

Mr. Munro explains the purpose of his bill is "to afford Canadians as beneficiaries of the gradual development of representative parliamentary democracy, the opportunity to commemorate . . . the signing of Magna Carta on June 15."

The fact that historians now agree that King John did not put his seal on the document until June 19, after five days of pressure, is immaterial. He met his barons at Runnymede on June 15 and heard their demands. And that date has been accepted as marking the achievement of Magna Carta, as, in a sense, it was; for it saw King John's acknowledgement of the barons' cause, if not his full surrender.

Meanwhile, in British Columbia, the education authority is stressing the significance of June 15 as Magna Carta Day.

The Vancouver School Board, for example, in the superintendent's bulletin of June 1, asks all principals to mark the occasion "as the first attempt at a documentation of human rights."

"It is not intended that this should be a holiday, but a day for the recognition of this historic event through discussion, essays, pageants or plays . . ."

This is an admirable approach, since it leaves to the discretion of principals the extent of the program.

Teachers will have no difficulty interesting their classes in Magna Carta's fascinating story and the students can make up their own minds whether it was indeed the contribution to English-speaking countries the late Earl Warren, chief justice of the United States, claimed for it:

"It is the very essence of the rule of law . . ." and "without law there is no liberty."

Unbalance of power

NOBODY LIKES TO CONTEMPLATE the possibility of war, on whatever scale; but then nobody can argue satisfactorily that there is no risk of it. Consequently most nations, while they do their utmost to control events which might lead to hostilities, at the same time make their best preparation to meet the crisis should it come. Some, of course, for one reason or another, choose to shirk responsibilities for defence, preferring to rely on the strength of friendly neighbors. Or they may take the fatalistic attitude, rather than the realistic, and simply keep their fingers crossed.

Responsible leaders everywhere, however, should be aware of warnings and developments the significance of which is inescapable. And so should the men and women who elect them.

Britain's Defence Secretary Roy Mason has taken the unprecedented step of warning his fellow ministers in the North Atlantic Treaty Organizations of the likelihood of an advance into Yugoslavia by the Soviet Union when Marshal Josip Tito surrenders the presidency. The risk would remain, said Mr. Mason, as long as the NATO allies failed to take a firmer stand against Russian intervention in such instances as the Angola civil war.

In Brussels, a number of defence ministers, including U.S. Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, said there was not a jot of evidence that President Fidel Castro had carried out his pledge to withdraw Cuban forces from Angola. There, it appears, they remain to see that policies approved by the Kremlin are adopted. And there they remain a threat to neighboring states where factional disorders are possible or proceeding, including Rhodesia.

At the same time Mr. Mason's warning was being digested, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Peter Hill-Norton, senior officer in the NATO alliance, drew attention to what he called a dangerous military vacuum in the South Atlantic and Indian Oceans.

"Ten years ago," he said, "there was an overwhelming preponderance of friendly or allied naval forces in those waters. The Soviet fleet seldom ventured into blue water. But as you know the situation is now reversed."

His reference was to the vulnerability of the sea route around the Cape of Good Hope, where 200 ships a day make passage.

The massive Soviet land and air power in Europe and Asia in the past has been balanced, to some extent, by the superiority at sea of the Western allies. When Admiral Hill-Norton spoke of the reversal of advantage, he was certainly aware that in the past 15 years the United States has built 122 naval vessels of over 3,000 tons against 57 by the Russians.

But — and this is the ominous factor — the Soviet has built 83 warships in the under-3,000 ton category compared with just two in the U.S.

Naval strategists, including U.S. Admiral Elmo Zumwalt, admit that the big ships upon which the Americans have concentrated their effort in the past, are singularly vulnerable to the smaller, faster, missile-armed Soviet vessels. But although there is a controversy over policy, it seems likely Admiral Hyman Rickover, father and sponsor of the big nuclear-powered navy, will continue to have the support of the planners.

That being the case, other partners in the NATO alliance would be wise to build the sort of war vessels that would match the Soviet strike force in order to restore unquestioned naval superiority and regain the over-all balance against the land-based power of the Warsaw Pact.

It is, after all, the lesser part of the load.

Boeing cashes in

Air boom in the Middle East

By JOSEPH FITCHETT from Beirut

Despite damaging disclosures about United States companies paying bribes to foreign officials, American aircraft makers are still making phenomenal sales to the Middle East.

American manufacturers in this lucrative market expect this year to sell nearly a billion dollars worth of commercial planes, predominantly wide-body airliners like the Boeing 747, Lockheed TriStar or McDonnell-Douglas DC-10.

Saudi Arabia is placing the largest single order in commercial aviation history — a $450 million package marking the first step in a major expansion of Saudia Airlines.

The Saudi order, going largely to Boeing, will also cover the costliest airliner ever sold: a "special performance" jumbo jet complete with operating theatre, according to sources familiar with the deal. The 747Sp, costing $100 million, can fly non-stop from Saudi Arabia to Cleveland, Ohio, where Saudi Arabia's ailing King Khalid has undergone open-heart surgery. This unique airborne VIP ambulance also has room to carry the large personal retinue of the Saudi Arabian ruler. The Middle East market is a flourishing contrast to the generally poor world outlook for air traffic and airliners. The high oil prices, which led to cutbacks in travel elsewhere, keep the Midle East buoyant. Experts claim that sales to the Middle Eastern market are the major factor in keeping the American aerospace industry on its feet until the world recession abates.

American manufacturers last year sold nearly $500 million worth of commercial airliners in this region, according to composite industry figures. Despite the risk of "oversell," the industry consensus predicts equally high market potential at least until 1980. This forecast says $2,500 million in oil earnings will be recycled to the West as airliner sales.

Middle East air traffic has leaped 20 per cent a year since 1973, but European and Soviet competition have been shut out of the booming market entirely for two years. The American monopoly in wide-body subsonic airliners has helped Boeing and other American firms to sell smaller aircraft, partly because of the attraction of fleet standardization.

American dominance has been threatened by the more attractive financing often offered by European government agencies and by embarrassing public disclosures about bribery. But the damage appears to have been minimal. "Of course, Lockheed's image has been hurt," said one knowledgeable industry source, referring to the California firm's confession of kickbacks to officials in Saudi Arabia and Iran.

But Middle Eastern opinion, already case-hardened to corruption, has little influence on government decisions.

"Lockheed's real problem is not its past deeds, but the fact that corporate officials complain their hands are tied about any future under-the-table payments," the source added. This may hurt sales, but Lockheed has just sold more Rolls-Royce-powered TriStars to Gulf Air and to Saudia.

Lockheed was obliged to confess its bribes because it depends on U.S. government financial support while Boeing, the giant Seattle firm, has refused to divulge its practices.

Boeing — whose Middle Eastern order book in 1975 nearly matched the company's record sales the previous year — continues to outdistance all American competitors. It builds an unrivalled range of aircraft to meet different routes and markets. But the influence game is important, too: It has the services of top go-betweens with customer governments.

Boeing will not discuss this aspect of its success, but it is an open secret here that it has a long-standing relationship with Mehdi Al-Tajir, the dynamic Dubai-based wheeler-dealer who is now oil-rich Abu Dubai's ambassador in London.

Tajir is very close to Abu Dhabi's ruler Sheikh Zayed, a lavish source of financing for Arab airlines. In every purchase involving Abu Dhabi financing, the order has gone to Boeing: Egypt Air, Syrian Airlines, Jordan's Alia and now Gulf Air, which chose Boeing 737s to replace British-made planes.

Boeing has just sold a VIP 707 to neighboring Zatar despite refusing to sign an affidavit denying that a commission had been paid.

Helped by agents like Tajir, Boeing had three-quarters of the airliner sales in the Middle East last year including the biggest single sale of the season: six airliners for Iraqi Airways plus a management contract, a $130 million deal on which Boeing beat both a rival Soviet-made tri-jet and the European Airbus.

These recent deals, big as they may be, are dwarfed by the future needs of Near Eastern airlines. Wide-body jetliners are coming into service this year with Iran Air, Syrian Airways, Iraqi Airways and Saudia. Kuwait Air and Egypt Air have entered the wide-body market, seeking three airliners each at an estimated $40 million a piece.

Washington Calling

Changing face of Europe

By MARQUIS CHILDS

We Americans are so preoccupied with our own presidential election that we have ignored the fact that elections in Western Europe could have consequences creating as great an uncertainty for the future as a possible shift of power would here at home. The old order that has prevailed with some variations since the end of the Second World War is changing and what is to come no one can foretell with any assurances.

★ ★ ★

Some attention has been paid to the Italian elections on June 20 and 21. The threat of a large Communist vote and a resultant coalition government gives NATO a bad case of the shakes. The plight of the Christian Democratic party is not unlike that of the Republicans here. They are unable to revitalize their party because the same old faces have turned up in one fragile government after another.

West Germany's elections on October 3 threatens to dislodge the coalition of Socialists and Free Democrats that has so long prevailed. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt is a popular figure throughout the country with a wide appeal to all parties.

But his Social Democrats have lost one provincial election after another and the polls reflect their declining strength. The handicap of the Christian Democrats is that they have no figure to match Schmidt. A new coalition with the Free Democrats joining the Christian Democrats would provide an opening for Frantz Joseph Strauss, head of the Bavarian branch of the Christian Democrats denounced by leftists as neo-fascist.

In Sweden, where an election will be held on September 19, the polls show Prime Minister Olof Palme and his Social Democrats running far behind the two centrist parties. This could spell the end of 40 years of Social-Democratic government. A centre-right coalition, frustrated in one election after another, would move to ease the burden of taxes levied to pay for social welfare standards that are the highest in the world.

The burden was dramatized by the arrest of Ingmar Bergman, the great film director, for allegedly failing to pay taxes on Swiss bank deposits. This created loud repercussions as Bergman left Sweden vowing never to return to his film studios in Stockholm.

To cut back taxes would almost of necessity mean reducing welfare benefits. That would be difficult to do in a country where a high standard of living has been sustained by phenomenally large old-age pensions and a nationwide medical care system.

While an upset in Sweden would not bring repercussions anywhere near those from a radical change in West Germany, it would nevertheless have a shock effect in Scandinavia. Norway is in a flap over impending oil wealth that would, in theory at least, give each of her four million citizens wealth comparable to that of the Kuwaiti in that fabulously oil-rich nation in the Persian Gulf.

In France elections are not due until 1978. But the suspicion is growing in Paris that President Valery Giscard d'Estaing may not wait until the Socialists and Communists have come together, each with greatly increased strength. Instead, in the near future he will dissolve the Assembly and call a quick election. The French Communists in the interval are trying to prove that they are not vassals of Moscow but have their own independent French policy.

In Britain the narrow margin held by Labor could be shattered if Harold Wilson's successor, James Callaghan, fails to get the unions to moderate their demands in accord with government policy. As for Spain, King Juan Carlos, the successor to Franco, is struggling thus far with little success to achieve a more moderate policy. He is opposed by the hard-line followers of Franco who stand in the way of any change whatsoever.

This is enough to indicate that 1977 is likely to have little resemblance to 1976 and that the U.S. president for the four years to come will have to make some new calculations. Adjustment to, say, an Italian government with two or three Communists in the cabinet will not be easy. American leadership will require more skill, more finesse, more willingness to compromise than in recent years. So-called summit conferences which President Ford proposes to hold on the eve of the Republican convention will serve as nothing more than a source of film for the television cameras.

Firmness needed

Military solutions

By PETER WORTHINGTON

One of the accepted truths of the late 1960s and early 1970s was that military solutions were no answer to international problems (especially in Vietnam), and that only negotiated peaces mean anything.

Both these views which gained wide currency among many people who should have known better — are nonsense. In fact one can make a strong case for the view that the only meaningful and lasting solutions are likely to be military ones. And a lasting peace is most likely if the chief negotiator is considerably stronger than the one being negotiated with!

There is peace in Indochina today. It is a cruel, harsh peace, but it is peace. It is "peace from the barrel of a gun." to paraphrase Mao Tse-tung.

★ ★ ★

Indochina is the very essence of a military solution. The "negotiated" settlement that won Henry Kissinger half a Nobel Peace prize was, in reality, a negotiated defeat for the American military and a negotiated surrender of Indochina in that it paved the way for an easier military solution by Hanoi. Those who pointed this fact out when it was happening, were ridiculed or maligned as being cold warriors, hawks, warmongers and the like.

The depressing thing for Westerners is that Kissinger, Nixon and other Western leaders should have known better and not taken the easy out or pretended they were doing something they weren't. They made virtue of what they felt was necessity. Or tried to.

If one looks even superficially at history, one can see the reality of military solutions. The Second World War was a military solution. Can you imagine a more permanent solution for Nazism than the military one that was imposed? The same for Mussolini. Nigeria's solution to Biafra's attempt at self-determination was a military one. So was Mao's victory in China.

★ ★ ★

Places where the "military solution" has been prevented, possibly have had more misery than if nature had taken its course. There have been four major Mideast wars between Israel and the Arabs. In each case Israel was prevented from imposing a "military solution." Watch and see what happens when the Arabs get the upper hand! Then a military solution won't be prevented. Israel will be destroyed — or a world war will evolve.

When mythology becomes confused with reality, a nation (or world) is in trouble. Maybe that's what is happening to the West in general and America in particular.

For example, mythology has it that the Americans lost in Indochina because it was an immoral, unpopular war and enthusiasm for it couldn't be maintained at home. Untrue. This may soothe liberal consciences but it bears little resemblance to the realities of human nature — or nationhood. Vietnam was an unpopular war for only one reason:

It was a losing war. Whoever heard of a winning war being unpopular? Morality has little or nothing to do with it — God is always on the winning side, because it is winners who determine the reasons, set the ethics and write the histories.

★ ★ ★

The immorality of America's Indochina war was not the fighting of it, but the refusing to win it. Once committed to war, it makes no sense not to win. Better had America won it quickly and straight, even if it meant invading the North. Or to give it up without a struggle, on the grounds of expediency and pragmatism. More honest too.

The New York Times recently published excerpts from the memoirs of North Vietnamese Chief of Staff Gen. Van Tien Dung who confirmed exactly what the "hawks" and so-called right-wing or conservative elements have said all along — that the anti-war movement in the U.S. encouraged and aided the Hanoi war effort. Communist forces had more staying power and counted on dissident action in America to weaken the U.S. war effort.

★ ★ ★

There is almost sympathy in Gen. Dung's report, as if he realizes the enemy's plight. He also gives credit to the Watergate scandal for weakening morale and creating confusion and dismay in the U.S., and directly contributing to Hanoi's victory. He wrote that there were "heated discussions" inside the politburo on how far the "ceasefire" could be violated. All agreed that the United States hadn't the will to send troops back into Indochina once they were withdrawn. It was an accurate assessment and enabled Hanoi to achieve its military solution.

It seems a safe bet that until the United States gets a different president and a different secretary of state, it — and the world — will be in jeopardy.

A weak president means future agitation in the Mideast and Africa, and a greater risk of superpower confrontation. A strong leader, with courage to stand for beliefs and principles, increases chances of world peace and decreases the risks of war. Contradictory as this may sound, it is nonetheless true.

"I know our filly can go the distance, Edward, but I'm not so sure about us."

Beware word 'natural'

By MELVIN MADDOCKS
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

In that once-pleasant preserve poets used to call the fair garden of English language, the word "natural" is rapidly getting out of hand — turning into a really rank weed. Consider just the overuse, the outright abuse of "natural" in advertisements.

Hair creams — made from gobs of who-knows-what — promise to give men's heads that "natural look." If the "natural look" was truly wanted, why would one apply this candidate for least-essential-petroleum by-product in the first place?

A synthetic lemonade is on the market, recommending its "natural" chemical flavor.

Self-contradiction achieves still more awesome heights in the phrase "natural cosmetics" (which may be rivaled only by "genuine facade" — alas, we are not making up that example either.).

★ ★ ★

But our favorite horror case at the moment is the advertisement fervidly promoting a "natural" adhesive — for false teeth.

In fact, this galloping weed "natural" is enough to send its victim groping for a large can of linguistic DDT — and don't talk to us about pollution, you polluters of "natural."

Would that the cure were so simple. Behind the petty farce of adman's English there lies a deeper confusion, dating back centuries. For "natural" always has been one of the most beloved (and misunderstood) words in the vocabulary.

When a baby is born he comes into the world outweighed by the "natural rights" accompanying him. All well and good insofar as they define political freedom. But they have a way of turning into a feathered bird called "expectations"; and a good deal of what is expected proves to have been previously covered under the heading of "privileges." (The word "privilege" — it can hardly be a coincidence — now is used in a sense nearly opposite to its original meaning: almost as a synonym for "rights.")

The child born heir to all these "natural rights" — the bill, rest assured, will be presented to the world later — is sent to a school where the ideal of education is to be spontaneous, enforced, adapted to the child's impulses. In a word, "natural."

During his 12 to 16 years of school and college, from the time he can make X's with a No. 2 pencil, the child and adolescent will submit to endless aptitude tests and personality profiles to determine (by computer, of course) his "natural" bent — the work he will want to do in life. But even when he turns to play, the sacred concept of "natural" will be rigidly enforced. Should he take up tennis, for instance, his coaches will begin by instructing him in that complicated rules for discovering his "natural" grip.

Once he goes into the world the young adult will discover he has many and often conflicting ambitions. He may want to have money without wanting a job. He may wish to travel and, at the same time, "settle down." He may like to have a "meaningful relationship" without making a "commitment." He will be told by the nearest psychologist that all these desires are "natural" too.

After half a lifetime of applying this master criterion "natural" to everything from the breakfast food he eats in the morning to the mattress he sleeps on at night — to say nothing of his behavior between — your average "natural" man will feel so self-conscious that he must resort to a guru to put him in touch with his "natural" religion.

One cannot argue with "natural." It is a loaded word, meaning pure and innocent; good and right. Not to be "natural" is to be "artificial" if not "toxic" as applied to things, "plastic" and "repressed" as applied to people.

Beware of the word "natural." More often than not it is its opposite — a calculated signal used by manipulative folks who are selling us goods or a bill of goods. Men are not and never can be "natural" in this simplistic sense. Nor should we want to be.

We are learners who have taught ourselves, in as many cases as not, what we seem to prefer to call our inpulses. We have something rather sophisticated behind us: history. And if we stop to think about it, one of the most sophisticated ideas to come out of that history is this concept of "natural."

If Italy votes for communists will France be far behind?

By DON COOK from Paris, France
The Los Angeles Times

If Italy votes Communist next week, will France be far behind?

The French Communist Party clearly is hoping for a political shot in the arm from Italian voters, and the Italian election results will have major repercussions on the French scene no matter what the outcome. But there are differences in the political conditions of France and Italy — large, immutable and in the end probably decisive when it comes to measuring the outlook for the Communists.

France, first of all, is a well-run country in which taxes are collected, public services operate, corruption is minimal, things work and the economic outlook is stable and improving. This is not to say that France is without problems or beyond the need of reform. But it does mean that the political-economic atmosphere in which the French Communist Party has to fight for support is entirely different from the Italian scene.

The second major difference is that in France the Communist Party finds itself playing an embarrassing second fiddle to the Socialist Party in an "alliance of the left" by which the Communists hope one day to catapult to power. In Italy, there is no such leftist alliance. The Socialists are divided and weak, and the Italian Communists therefore ride high as the only strong and viable political force to the left of the ruling Christian Democrats.

Not so in France. In the last test of voting strength, the canton elections in March, the combined left total was 53 per cent, with 31 per cent going to the Socialist and the Communists stuck at 22 per cent.

The third major handicap which the French Communists face in wooing voters is the national skepticism about the party's hasty 1975 conversion to independence from Moscow, and its assiduous cultivation of a new democratic image and political garb. The Communists, declares a Socialst party leader and believer in the alliance of the left, are "pedaling like mad to catch up with the Italian party several years too late." The party's disavonal of any aims of "dictatorship of the proletariat" has failed so far to increase the Communist popular vote in France.

There also is ample evidence that a hard line Stalinist core is sulking resentfully against the change in the party and simply waiting for a chance to stage a counter-revolution against party secretary Georges Marchais and swing back to a pro-Moscow posture.

Whether this will ever happen with the French Communists remains to be seen. Certainly a victory for the Italian party right now would bolster Marchais in selling the new independent democrats line to his own followers. But conversely, a setback for the Italian Communists, coupled with lack of election successes with the French voters — plus the irritations of the second-fiddle role with the Socialists — could well boil into a revolt against Marchais in the months ahead.

Independence from Moscow is, after all, a new and recent exercise for the French Communists, who held slavishly to the Moscow line right through Prague in 1968.

The Italians, on the other hand, as far back as the days of Togliatti in 1948, have a long, consistent and therefore believable record of independent debate and independent policies. The present leader, Enrico Berlinguer, says he could not possibly reverse this situation even if he wanted to. In France, a reversion to a pro-Moscow line is certainly a possibility and everybody, including Marchais, knows it.

The key political question in France, therefore, is not how the Communists are doing but how the Socialist-Communist alliance is prospering. Will it hold together? If it does split, will it be the Communists who pull out or the Socialists who make the break? If it does not split, will the Socialists indeed insist on taking Communist ministers back into a leftist coalition government for the first time since 1946? These are the imponderables which will be played out in France in municipal elections in March, 1977, in national legislative elections which must be held by the autumn of 1978, and eventually in the next presidential election in 1981.

So for, the French Socialist Party is certainly pleased with the results of its alliance with the Communists. There is also, apparently, a fixed determination by the present Socialist Party leader, Francois Mitterrand, and his top echelon to go all the way down the line with the Communists and take them into the government if the alliance prospers and wins a majority of the National Assembly seats in 1978.

There is an endless variety of justifications for this Socialist position, which are endlessly explained and paraded in every political conversation. But it really boils down to a simple statistical fact. When Mitterrand took over the party leadership five years ago, and set out to solidify the leftist alliance, the Socialists had only about 10 per cent of the popular vote and the Communists were up around 23 per cent. The socialists have prospered steadily at the polls and the Communists are still stuck at 22 per cent to 23 per cent.

Why? The Socialists are convinced it is because the French can now vote for a strong left and not a weak left, that the alliance makes for a strong left, but the voters mark up the ballots for the Socialists instead of the Communists.

Mitterrand proclaims over and over that he is no Marxist, that he is not about to sell out France's democratic heritage.

But Mitterrand is also a politician. If Communist votes are essential to his victory, he is prepared to rely on them and prepared to make the necessary political payoff. Whether the rest of France is prepared to go along with such a transaction remains to be seen.

A last bit of nature

For more than 40 years I have lived at 518 Beach Drive overlooking Shoal Bay. My father purchased the house in 1921. At that time the bay was still licking its wounds from sewer construction.

As a child I watched the growth take hold on the barren cliffs. At first, weeds and grass, then the birds dropped seeds and little by little, wild rose bushes and lupin appeared. This took 25 years. Finally trees grew. Then the concrete sea-wall put in its unsightly appearance along half the bay. So all that was left was 500 feet of virgin beauty.

By now neighbors felt sorry for what was left and threw on their extra seeds and bulbs so now that is a colorful array at all seasons. Wild life abounds, otter, mink and raccoons live in peace. Birds shelter from the storms and nest during the year.

Is this all to disappear because there is no other place to put a sewage pumping station?

The people who jog and walk their dogs are protected from the wind and rain by the wild rose bushes and trees. Do we stand by again and watch the rape of the land unnecessarily?

For God's sake, save this last bit of nature on Shoal Bay.

All stars

There has been much criticism levelled against today's Canadian hockey player. And I'm a little tired of listening to it all.

I have put together an unbeatable Canadian hockey team that, given the chance to play together, could defeat anyone. I'm willing to bet a month's wages that this team could handily win the World Cup of Hockey this fall.

General manager, Sam Pollock; coach Scotty Bowman.

Defence: Bobby Orr, Guy Lapointe, Brad Park, Denis Potvin, Serge Savard, and Larry Robinson.

Goaltenders: Ken Dryden, Gerry Cheevers.

Centre: Gil Perrault, Marcel Dionne, Pete Mahovlich, Bobby Clarke.

Rightwing: Guy Lafleur, Reg. Leach, Mickey Redmond, Rene Robert.

Leftwing: Bobby Hull, Rick Martin, Bill Barber, Marc Tardif.

Vote

Well, its happened again. It would appear that our government (Social Credit, that is) has been suckered in by a bunch of the local smooth-talking business boys to have us pay for a referendum vote on the 22nd of June in the matter of incorporation of this our community of Sooke (or is that Sooty, Sooner, Scooter or Sooter).

They have been led to believe, by one subterfuge or another that we, the voters of Sooke area, repeat area (Veitch Creek to Muir Creek) are right behind this ploy. That is the biggest bit of misinformation they could possibly get. The people of this area are quite happy with the way things are going at present.

What is wrong with the men and women who are presently involved in the planning subcommittee, the recreation committee, the sewer study committee and the historical museum committee? These are all public-spirited citizens who are voluntarily going about the task of caring for our community for the good of the community. There is not one of them who is involved with one or two irons in the fire. What they do they do to better our community. With people of this calibre working for us who needs elected representatives or paid public employees?

It would be a matter to think about. Imagine these wheelers and dealers calling for a vote on June the 22nd, with the coho season starting on the 15th of June. That does away with the fishermen's vote and with a bit of luck (this is how they think) the forest could be shut down and that does away with the loggers' vote, and as the school year should be just about completed that should have people on summer holidays, or busy preparing to go.

Then there are those of us who work for a living; the 22nd is a Tuesday which is a working day which means some of us may or may not have time to vote. Pretty crafty.

Another point to ponder. How many residents came to Sooke because of its country atmosphere and how many of these same people have now decided to sell and move if incorporation takes place? And who really makes a profit on this buying and selling of houses? Real estate agents, that's who.

So whatever happenes on June 22 will be up to us voters. No mater how you think, get out and exercise your franchise, get out and vote.

J. W. BELL,
R.R. 2, Sooke.

Shoal Bay

Beautiful Shoal Bay!

Many people must be horrified at the intention of the Capital Region Board and the Oak Bay municipality to erect a concrete sea wall and esplanade along the length of Shoal Bay, as well as a pump house on the cliffs. Must all our natural beauty be encased in concrete? We have a sample of what it will look like in the short piece erected by Miss Ross as a memorial—a blank concrete wall and a piece of "esplanade" which is always covered in logs and rocks. Do we need more of it?

To the west of that futile piece of work we have a bank mostly covered with pleasant green vegetation topped by a hedge of wild roses. Do we want to lose this for an unsightly wall? If so we may as well forget the title Beautiful Shoal Bay.

We have an example in Foul Bay, once a little gem of peace and clean sand. Progress brought a large access ramp. The bulldozers did a fine job of the clearing for the erection by churning up the sand of a large area and leaving a mess of chunks of hard clay and rocks.

The east end of Shoal Bay with its outcrop of rocks where children spend many happy hours, with its small bays a haven for many sea birds—is this to be decorated by a concrete sewage pump house?

The cost of living rises, and so do our taxes, and we pay them knowing there are many necessities and improvements to be done. I cannot think this Shoal Bay project is either an improvement or a necessity.

I suggest the money be better spent to improve antiquated drainage pipes. I live in an area where a block of six houses have the problem of flooded gardens and crawl spaces during the winter months. I am told by the Municipality that I may drain off the water into the road drain, providing I pay not only for the connection and the lateral but for the 60 feet of road drain, that, having been put down prior to 1914, is only a 3" pipe and to accommodate the water it will have to be changed to a larger pipe. This is to cost me, were I willing, and I am not, just under $1,200!

What do I pay taxes for?

Spectating?

Under a recent Colonist picture of two students in fond embrace while their classmates were playing a high school rugby match, I was appalled to read "these two found a more interesting pursuit than spectating on the sidelines."

Spectating?

One expects words like spectating to be expectorated by professors, civil servants and other government functionaries who long ago forsook the English language in favor of a weird jargon with which they might impress each other.

But it is no part of a newspaper's duty to contribute to this bastardization of the language.

Spectating, for pete's sake!

Erma Bombeck

The way the demonstrator in the department store explained it, the only thing that stood between thin and me was a doorknob.

You just hooked the pulleys to a doorknob, attached them to your ankles and wrists and exercised your little heart out.

I had to believe that. She was living proof. If that girl had drunk a bottle of creme soda and turned sideways, she would have looked like a thermometer.

She said just 15 minutes a day with this little exerciser and I too would be able to walk on the beach without children tagging along for shade.

I hesitated at first, then thought it would be nice to have thighs that didn't look like pockets, knees that didn't blouse and a stomach that would stop laughing at the same time I did.

From past experiences too painful to relate, I have learned never to have the family around when you're going the self-improvement route. So, I waited until the house was empty and unpacked my harness.

I don't want to be dramatic, but if John Wayne took as long to saddle a horse as it took for me to figure out those strings, he'd have missed the war.

I stretched out on my back and began hoisting my legs into the air by pulling my arms down. I had gone through about five or six of these lifts when I experienced pain — pain that can only be caused by a door slamming into your skull.

"Are you okay?" asked my husband.

"Compared to what?"

"This is a dumb question," he said, "but what are you supposed to be stretched out on the floor with strings attached to your arms and legs dangling from a doorknob? Don't tell me. I got it! A fat marionette!"

"I am trying to use muscles I have never used before," I panted.

"That sounds like a reasonble idea. Why don't you use the head muscle that warns you not to lie down in the path of a door that opens in on your head?"

"If you are finished giving advice, bug off."

"It's going to hurt your head when I go. How about my putting a sign on this one: "CAUTION, WIDE LOAD." Or locking it? Or putting a hinge on you so that you swing open with the door? Where are you going?"

Have you ever tried to walk out of a room gracefully, dragging a door behind you?

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was sharply higher at the close of moderate trading Monday.

The Toronto market appeared to be sparked by the surge at New York where the Dow Jones index gained 12.44 to close at 991.24, its highes since May 20.

A total of 207 contracts were traded on the options maket, down from 243 Friday.

Of the 21 blocks traded, a 100,000-share block of Bank of Montreal shares at $15¼ a share was the largest.

Celanese Canada Ltd., with a 30,000-share block at $5 a share took second place, followed by Thomson Newspapers A with 15,600 shares at $13 a share.

Trading was resumed at the opening on shares of Bruck Mills following Friday's halt. The halt was issued pending release of news that a special shareholders' meeting is scheduled for July 19th to discuss a refinancing program to give the company a more solvent position.

However, Bruck shares were untraded Monday. The Class A shares last traded at $5⅞ each and Class B at $1.50 a share.

Amont other industrials, IBM gained 2⅜ to $253⅜ and Atco Industries Ltd. 1 to $15½ after reporting an increase to $2.82 from $2.75 in annual net earnings.

Air cargo hike sought

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada said Monday it has applied to the Canadian transport commission and United States regulatory authorities for a cargo rate increase of about 10 per cent on Canadian and U.S. flights.

The new tariffs are to apply to both general and specific commodity - rated traffic as of July 1 while container rates are to increase later in the year, Don Richardson, the airline's general manager, said in a statement.

TWO DRILLSHIPS, Canmar Explorer III, left, and the Canmar Explorer, in the drydock at Esquimalt Harbor, are just days away from sailing north to Beaufort Sea for $200 million offshore drilling venture. Parent company, Dome Petroleum of Calgary, has spent more than $45 million in B.C. in last two years preparing for season.

Canmar president:

Bribery charge 'ridiculous'

Gordon Harrison, president of Canadian Marine Drilling Ltd. (Canmar) lashed back Monday at federal New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent for his attack on the company last Friday.

There was "absolutely no basis" to Broadbent's attack on Canmar for having flown in a dozen or so natives from the Mackenzie Delta in the Northwest Territories to view off shore oil-drilling equipment exhibited at Esquimalt Harbor, Harrison said.

Broadbent had accused Dome Petroleum Ltd., of which Canmar is a subsidiary, of "cheap bribery" in demonstrating the equipment to the natives.

The natives were paid all expenses plus $100 a day during their three-day trip south.

The move by the company, Broadbent said, was a "cheap public relations gimmick."

But Harrison said the majority of the natives flown to Esquimalt "are making a lot more than $100 a day during trapping season."

To call $100 a day paid by Dome a bribe, Harrison said, was ridiculous.

"They are all responsible people representing their communities and while they were here, they formed a committee through which we will operate," he said.

The natives, he said, "want to know what we are doing," and they will tell the company what they want through the committee, he added.

"I see no basis at all for the attacks," Harrison said.

He added the firm brought 11 natives to Esquimalt; they stayed for three days and returned home Sunday.

"We gave them an extensive tour of the ships," Harrison said.

Canmar Monday also gave about 24 members of the press an extensive tour of the three types of ships currently here. They were flown in by company jet from Edmonton, Calgary and news outlets in the Northwest Territories.

Yarrows Ltd. shipyard workers are swarming over two drillships prior to their departure in the next few days. Canmar Explorer is in drydock, having fair leaders and other equipment installed while Canmar Explorer III is nearby, having nearly completed an extensive refit that began here last March.

The two drillships, accompanied by three supply-icebreaker tugs and a main cargo headquarters ship, will leave B.C. ports before June 23, headed for the Bering Strait and Point Barrow. They hope to be in position for the drilling startup in the Beaufort Sea before Aug. 1.

Doman trims mills' output

DUNCAN — Only improved lumber market conditions will restore full production at Doman Industries Ltd. Nanoose and Ladysmith mills, according to company president Herb Doman.

Doman said Monday that the two mills in question will cut back from three to two shifts per day for the next nine-week period. This will allow several long-term employees to enjoy longer vacations and perhaps level off inventory.

Doman denied other reports that the two mills were closing. The big, new mill at Cowichan Bay will continue to operate on a full-time basis.

The company said that the economic recovery of the country wasn't matching expectations held earlier. The comments came when it announced six-months earnings report at the weekend which showed that earnings slipped to $719,000 or 11 cents a share compared to $988,000 or 15 cents a share for the first half of 1975.

Sales were $23.6 million compared to $18.5 million last year.

Earnings per common share, given in the company statement, account for the fact that shares were split on a 2 for 1 basis last April.

Sales, credit climb

OTTAWA (CP) — Total sales at the retail level in April were $4.85 billion, a jump of 21.2 per cent from the total a year earlier, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Sales increased in all provinces and all of the 28 trade groups, including increases of 33.6 per cent for grocery, confectionary and sundries stores and 31.1 per cent at service stations.

OTTAWA (CP) — Total consumer credit outstanding on the books of institutions which report monthly was $19.4 billion in April, up 16.5 per cent from the total a year earlier, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

The over-all total of consumer credit outstanding — including credit card and mortgage loan companies and others, which report quarterly — was $24.07 billion for the first three months of 1976, up 15.8 per cent from a year earlier.

King Fisherman

Biggies eluded Chinook Club weekend derby

All the big fish were out in the Pedder-Becher Bay-Sooke waters over the weekend and the elite Chinook Club anglers in Saanich Inlet had to be content with an eight-pounder as top fish in the Dr. Hugh Clarke Chinook Club derby Sunday.

Peter Stephenson landed the winning fish. Wally Fenske was only one ounce behind with a 7.15-pounder and Stephen Rose was third with a 7.10-pounder.

Hidden weight winners were Alf Joyce, Al Price, Earl Gordon, Steve Davies, Mel Lohr, Irene Wilkin and Garry Vaughan.

At Becher Bay, Bruce Lohr was top weekend angler with a 42-pounder taken off Beechey Head on Saturday.

Walt Tiesu of Cowichan Lake had a surprise catch at the weekend when he reeled in a 3.11-pound Dolly Varden on gang troll and worm, from Cowichan Lake. Normally Dolly Vardens are taken only on bait fished close to the bottom.

Fred Cabeldu

Well-known realtor dies after long illness

Brig. Frederick Norman Cabeldu's selfless contributions to Victoria are at a close.

The real estate agent whose accomplishments in the city mark him as a historical figure, died Saturday after a lengthy illness.

Remembered especially by those who knew his wartime efforts, Cabeldu led Victoria's Canadian Scottish Regiment in 1944 European D-Day landings, and saw further action that gained him the decorations of CBE, DSO and bar, Legion of Honor, and Croix de Guerre.

He is survived by his wife Margaret Alice of Sidney, daughters Annette O'Shea of Edmonton and Dulcie Boyle of Victoria, son John of Victoria, brothers Ted of Victoria and Harry of Vancouver and six grandchildren.

His years in Victoria after the war were filled with duties as alderman, head of his real estate company, president of the Union Club and Victoria Real Estate Board, and chairman and founder of the Greater Victoria Water Board.

Born in 1905 in England, the energetic Cabeldu grew up in Japan before moving to the city in 1919 and enrolling at

Cabeldu

St. Michael's University School. What was then University Military School gave him grounding in academic and military studies and sports.

He was head boy and cadet corps leader in his final school year, and a valuable team member in rugby and track in which he later maintained an interest.

His business career started when he joined the Royal Bank. He left to pursue real estate in 1926 — the same year he signed up as Pte. F. N. Cabeldu in the Scottish militia.

Commissioned within two years, he had risen to major by 1937 and went oversees as company commander. His responsibilities increased as he became second in command in 1943, then lieutenant-colonel shortly after.

Serving frequently under fire, he was put out of action temporarily at one point when a German artillery shell made a direct hit on his battalion headquarters.

He put his intelligence and energy to work in other ways back in Victoria after 1945.

Fund-raising through war bonds was a major effort as he continued to head F. N. Cabeldu Realty.

Cabeldu served on the board of St. Michael's for almost 20 years, and gave his time to organizations including Kiwanis and the Canadian Club.

Elected alderman for the 1947-48 term, he also served as chairman of the fledgling regional water board.

Funeral will be held Thursday in Christ Church Cathedral at 2 p.m., with a military graveside service at Royal Oak Burial Park.

Getting jobs harder now for illegal immigrants

OTTAWA (UPI) — Manpower Minister Robert Andras Monday announced measures to make it more difficult for illegal immigrants to find jobs in Canada.

Andras, who is also immigration minister, said the tightened up social security legislation would make it more difficult for the unscrupulous to exploit illegal immigrants by threatening to expose them.

He said he also expected the tightened controls would prevent unnecessary worsening of Canada's 7.1 per cent unemployment rate.

Main feature of the new central mechanism is the addition of a distinctive number 9 first digit to the social insurance number issued to persons coming to Canada for temporary employment.

Those who hold a number 9 social insurance number will be eligible to work in Canada only if they are also in possession of a valid employment visa issued by the Manpower office.

The minister also said he has issued new regulations making it more difficult to obtain a regular social insurance number. As of July 1 applicants will be required to provide two documents rather than one proving their status as Canadians or landed immigrants.

Andras said "this will make it more difficult for people to take work illegally in this country. The new regulations will also help stop the exploitation of these people by unscrupulous employers.

"As well, potential illegal immigrants will learn that jobs in Canada will be more difficult to obtain . . ."

He said the new regulations should help end low wages and poor working conditions in occupations filled by illegal foreign workers, and result in increased availability of jobs for Canadians.

Andras said a letter was being sent to all Canadian employers outlining the reasons for the new number 9 designation and warning it is up to employers to ensure those bearing these cards also have a valid work permit.

Guinness book now displays records

By AVERY HUNT
Colonist - Newsday Service

NEW YORK — In what used to be the world's tallest building, the world's first Guinness World Records Exhibit Hall was opened to illustrate a graphic assortment of facts gleamed from the venerable book of world records.

The 5,000 square foot exhibition in the basement of the Empire State Building houses 240 different exhibits of astounding facts and feats and world records, with one almost blank wall reserved for a bulletin board that will record records as they are reported to the Guinness people.

The exhibit has been set up to further promote the book, if such is necessary, and to make money. Admission is $1.50 for adults, $1.25 for children, with special group rates for school and tourist groups. Visitors can gape at a plaster cast of the world's largest man, shiver at the mockup of the world's longest earthworm, drool over the world's most expensive shoes, or try out for themselves the world's worst tongue-twister ("the sixth sick sheik's sixth sheep's sick," in case anyone wants to give it a shot).

The exhibit itself was financed jointly by the book's British publisher, Guinness Superlatives, Ltd., and creators Norris and the late Ross McWhirter, and Sterling Publishing Company and Bantam, its American publishers in hard and softcover, respectively. The trans-Atlantic enterprise is being run under a specially setup separate corporate umbrella, Guinness World Record Exhibit Hall, Inc., under which all licensing agreements for Guinness marketing spin-offs, from record-imprinted paper cups to T-shirts and games, are and will be made.

Progenitor of all this is the Guinness Book of World Records, first published in 1956 as a public relations effort by Ireland's largest company and best-known brewery. The book was created to help quench the notorious Irish thirst for barroom banter about the biggest, the longest, the oldest, the shortest, the mostest . . . etc. etc. "We never really suspected that Guinness would ever become a runaway best seller and we had only modest hopes for its success in America," writes Benjamin Guinness, Earl of Iveagh, current chairman of the family stout empire, in Bantam's newest edition ($1.95).

The statement might very well be the world's most modest, for the fact-filled tome known as "the book to settle all arguments," is the world's all-time copyrighted best seller, with 23,500,000 copies sold. In 14 languages, yet. It outstripped that other old publishing workhorse, Dr. Spock, when Guinness sales topped 21,916,000 in November of 1974. Only the Bible has done better over the long haul.

There are 2,000 new records in the current edition, for a grand total of 20,000. Norris McWhirter, co-creator (along with his late twin, Ross), and author and meticulous editor of the Guinness books, has put to memory all record entries — no doubt a record in itself — because "it's easier than looking it up!"

UMPIRE Satch Davidson gets the last word in in cap-to-cap argument with manager Joe Frazier of New York Mets over controversial play during Mayor's Trophy game between the National League Mets and American League Yankees before 36,361 fans Monday to Yankee Stadium. Yankees staged a four-run uprising in the fourth inning and went on to an 8-4 win, their third victory in a row in the annual charity game. Yankees now have an 8-6 edge in the 14-year-old rivalry.

New WCHL look likely as Clubs eye Spokane

BRANDON — There's a good possibility that the Western Canada Hockey League will add a second United States-based team today and will have a new look for the 1976-77 season.

Speaking from the annual meeting Monday, Victoria Cougar owner-manager Pat Ginnell said league governors will hear a request from Gerry Brisson, owner-manager of Winnipeg Clubs, to move his team to Spokane, Wash.

"There's no way he (Brisson) can operate in Winnipeg against Bobby Hull and the Swedes (of the World Hockey Association Winnipeg Jets) so a move to Spokane is quite possible."

Brisson has been in the Washington city for several days, arranging possible playing dates and arena rental, and will address the annual meeting this morning.

If the move is approved, the 12-team major junior hockey league could be split into three divisions for next season — Pacific coast, central and eastern — from the present two-division setup.

Governors gave formal approval Monday to the Edmonton Oil Kings to move to Portland, Ore., and the new team, to be known as the Winter Hawks, would join the Cougars, New Westminster Bruins and Kamloops Chiefs in the proposed Pacific Coast division.

Spokane, Calgary Centennials, Medicine Hat Tigers and Lethbridge Broncos are possibilities for the Central Division and Saskatoon Blades, Flin Flon Bombers, Brandon Wheat Kings and Regina Pats would remain in the Eastern Division.

Governors expect to spend the next two days on scheduling and Ginnell said Cougars would play most of their 36 home games on Saturdays and Tuesdays as in past seasons.

In other matters, Saskatoon manager-coach Jackie McLeod has purchased the team from Jim Piggott; Bill Burton of Lethbridge has been elected chairman of the board of governors and league president Ed Chynoweth has been asked to look into the hiring of one or two supervisors of officials.

The governors believe the move will help the continued improvement of officiating. The WCHL will also investigate the possibility of hiring full-time officials.

Burton replaces Del Wilson of Regina, who held the post for the last four years.

In another matter, the league formally approved a four-team tournament, with one team from the Soviet Union, to be held in Alberta next season. The tournament was proposed by Chynoweth several months ago.

The other teams will be all-star squads from the WCHL, Ontario Hockey Association and Quebec Major Junior Hockey League.

The tournament, which runs from Dec. 26 to Jan. 2, 1977, will be a double round-robin, with four games in Edmonton, four in Calgary, two in Medicine Hat and two in Lethbridge.

Exact dates and venues for the games will be announced later.

Offer made for boxla transfers

TORONTO (CP) — An official of the Ontario Lacrosse Association said Monday he is confident an agreement will be worked out to allow three Peterborough lacrosse players to play in the west. Association-secretary Jack Christie said the matter is under discussion and a decision will be announced soon.

The three players, Bob Wasson, Randy Brian and Maurice Jodoin, all played junior lacrosse in Peterborough last year, but have gone west to play there. Wasson has gone to Nanaimo Timbermen and the other two to Coquitlam Adanacs. All three are over junior age and were drafted by senior teams in the OLA.

The Western Lacrosse Association decided Sunday to make a cash offer to the OLA for the rights to the three and officials said they would start proceedings to withdraw from the Canadian Lacrosse Association if the offer is refused.

Expos slow ambitious Padres

If it can't be said they went from the sublime to the ridiculous on Monday night, San Diego Padres at least learned that life in the major-baseball leagues does indeed have its ups and downs.

Glowing with satisfaction after a Sunday sweep over Philadelphia Phillies, who have the best record in either league, the Padres were stopped cold by a pitcher working for the club with the worst record in either league and producing his first major league shutout.

That would be righthander Don Stanhouse, who doled out three singles in leading Montreal Expos to a 3-0 decision.

The result dropped the ambitious Padres six games from the top of the National League West.

But Sunday was another day, the Padres titillating 43,474 San Diego fans by bowling over the Phillies 5-0 and 4-3.

The huge crowd was another tribute to Randy Jones, who is averaging 40,000 fans for home games. The amazing lefthander, who owns both the shutouts inflicted on the slugging Phillies this season, pitched a typical six-hitter which was his seventh straight victory, gave him a 12-2 record for the season and reduced his earned-run average to 2.10.

Jones' well controlled low-and-slow sinker left the Phillies in a state of frustration — the usual reaction for Jones' opponents.

"If I was a pitcher I'd be embarrassed to go to the mound with that kind of stuff," fumed slugger Mike Schmidt.

It doesn't embarrass Jones, who is the first pitcher this season to deny Schmidt, Dick Allen, Greg Luzinski and the rest of the Phillies an extra-base hit in a game. And Jones is closing in on a record set by Christy Mathewson in 1916. In using only 95 pitches and taking only an hour and 54 minutes to complete the game, Jones didn't walk anyone. And that gave him 55 consecutive innings without a base on balls, only 13 away from Mathewson's amazing 68.

And to show that he really is different, Jones told a questioner that he won't talk about a raise in salary, estimated at $65,000, because "the club stood behind me when I wasn't doing well."

That was two years ago, when he lost 22 games. He won 20 last year.

Asked how he would rate his 12th win, Jones replied "I'd rate it about 12th."

Highlight of other Monday action was the one-hitter pitched by Rick Wise of the Boston Red Sox, who lost his no-hitter in the third inning but went on to stop Minnesota Twins, 5-0.

Also on Monday, San Francisco Giants traded away first-baseman Willie Montanez and there was speculation that Baltimore Orioles were close to a deal with Chicago White Sox involving lefthander Ken Holtzman.

Montanez, who drove in 101 runs and batted .302 for the Giants last year after being obtained in a deal with the Phillies, had asked to go to a club in a warmer climate. The Giants obliged by sending him to Atlanta in a five-player deal.

The Giants also gave up shortstop Craig Robinson and a minor-league player to be named while the Braves gave up first-baseman Darrell Evans and second-baseman Marty Perez. Montanez was hitting .318 while Evans and Perez, both regulars last season, were hitting .173 and .250, respectively.

Holtzman, playing out his option, was first rumored to be going to Kansas City Royals, but that deal appeared to have fallen through. Holtzman, who lives in the Windy City, would like to return to Chicago, and it's said the White Sox are also interested in second-baseman Bobby Grich and third-baseman Brooks Robinson.

Trevino out of Open

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Lee Trevino, twice a United States Open champion and one of the favorites for the 1976 title, has withdrawn from the national golf championship to be played this week at Atlanta. U.S. Golf Association officials in Atlanta said that Trevino has pulled out of the Thursday-through-Sunday tournament at the Atlanta Athletic Club and his spot in the select field has been filled by touring pro Lyn Lott. Trevino, winner of the Colonial National Invitation tournament at Fort Worth, Tex., this spring, is suffering from a painful, pinched nerve in his back.

Cha Cha cracks barrier

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Shirley "Cha Cha" Muldowney shattered a drag racing barrier Sunday, becoming the first woman ever to win a major top fuel championship in the National Hot Rod Association's Springnationals.

The 35-year-old driver from Mount Clemens, Mich., overcame blown pistons after her semi-final run to polish off Bob Edwards in the finals with Springnationals and National Trailway records of 5.96 seconds for the quarter mile.

Miss Muldowney, the only licensed woman in top fuel drag racing, ran into engine problems near the finish of her semi-final victory over Ted Wolf.

"A gasket blew. Oil came out of the motor and it caught fire," she said. "It completely melted one piston and damaged four others."

Her crew installed new pistons in the same Plymouth engine and she responded with a record performance that wiped out the 5.98 that Gary Beck of Edmonton ran in winning the 1974 Springnationals. Her speed of 243.90 miles an hour was shy of Beck's record of more than 247 m.p.h.

At attorneys-general meeting

Hockey violence likely topic

SASKATOON (CP) — Hockey violence will probably be discussed by provincial attorneys-general at a meeting in Vancouver this week, Saskatchewan attorney-general Roy Romanow said Monday.

The meeting comes as players from Saskatoon and Victoria hockey teams face assault charges in court. The players — Tim Williams and Greg Tebbutt of Victoria Cougars and Peter Goertz of Saskatoon Blades—were charged in connection with incidents in a game Feb. 20 between the two Western Canada Hockey League teams in the Saskatoon arena. Three Saskatoon players were injured. Williams and Tebbutt's next court appearance will be next Monday and Goertz will appear Wednesday.

Romanow told a news conference he felt it would be a large step if the federal government conference in Vancouver produced a statement seeking a study into hockey violence as a matter of concern for all of Canada. Although the issue will not be of top priority at the meeting, Romanow said he expects views on the problem will be exchanged to determine if a uniform approach can be taken, and see what can be done to apply pressure to various leagues to "clean up their own act."

He said those at the conference will try to find some mechanism to "approach these trend-setters (the leagues) and get them onto the idea they've got to start policing themselves."

Frazier, Foreman fight tonight

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Smokin' Joe Frazier will try to "cool it" tonight as he tries to save his career in a fight against George Foreman, who humiliated him in Jamaica almost 3½ years ago.

On Jan. 22, 1973, Frazier, then the heavyweight champion of the world, was knocked down six times and stopped in two rounds by George Foreman, who was a 3½-to-1 underdog.

A loss would severely damage Foreman's career, too. But it probably wouldn't end his career since George is only 27, five years younger than Frazier.

There will be no network television coverage of the fight which is being shown on a closed-circuit network in theatres and sports centres.

Rasmussen tops field

Mike Rasmussen won the Victoria Wheelers' 40-kilometre bicycle time trial on West Saanich Road on Sunday, turning in a time of 67 minutes and 10 seconds.

Michel Peron, the top junior in the event, finished second at 67:25, followed by Terry Oldford (67:28), and Don Hiscock (67:46). Phil Quillevere (68:10) was runner-up in the junior division and Ray Peron (78:56) was third.

Pair of potent Bakers can pad totals tonight

Kevin Alexander and Bob Cool of Victoria McDonalds, the most potent 1-2 punch in the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League this season, will be out to fatten their scoring averages tonight at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

The last-place Richmond Roadrunners provide the opposition for the 8 p.m. game.

The two sharpshooters are well in front in the individual points race and Alexander is taking aim at the Canadian junior points record he established last season.

Alexander has a league-leading 42 goals, 55 assists and 97 points, an average of 8.1 for the first 12 games this season. In 1975 he scored 115 goals and drew 92 assists for 207 points and has a three-year record of 246 goals, 218 assists in 64 games, or 7.2 points per game.

Cool is slightly behind his flashy teammate, but his 80 points are 19 more than third-place Mike Reelie of Coquitlam J-Hawks.

In his three-year career with McDonalds, Cool has 106 goals and 215 assists in 64 starts, a 5.0 points-per-game average.

McDonalds hold a three-point edge on second-place New Westminster Junior Salmonbellies and Burnaby Cablevision following Sunday action.

New Westminster rallied in the third period Sunday to top Cablevision, 14-11, at Burnaby Arena, with Jack Fulton, Mario Govorchin and Mark Tuura contributing three goals each to the win.

Kelly McLenaghen scored five goals and drew three assists for Burnaby.

Former Tiger-Cat quits Lions camp

Canadian Press

Doug Collins, an eight-year veteran of the Canadian Football League, walked off the field at the British Columbia Lions' opening practice Monday in Penticton.

Head-coach Cal Murphy indicated he will make no effort to keep the offensive tackle in the training camp and said his name will be added to the Lions' retirement list.

"I'm sure he has given this a great deal of thought," said Murphy. "And if his mind's made up I won't try to talk him out of it."

Collins, 30, was signed by the Lions last December as a free agent after he was released by Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Elsewhere in the CFL:

● Cornerback Jim Elder, obtained in an off-season trade which sent Paul Williams to Saskatchewan Roughriders, has been placed on the retirement list by Winnipeg Blue Bombers after failing to reach a contract agreement and failing to report for the opening of the clubs training camp;

● Lineman Tufuli Uperesa has informed Ottawa Rough Riders that he has decided to retire and defence-back Al Brenner failed to show up for the Monday opening of training camp;

● Canadian wide-receiver Skip Eaman and guard Ray Watrin of Montreal Alouettes have announced their retirements.

Bates bats tamed

Magicians jolt league leaders

Extra batting practice will be in order for Victoria Bates during the next few days.

Away to an amazing start in the Pacific Coast Men's Fastball League season, Bates were jolted back to reality Sunday when Vancouver Magicians swept a doubleheader by scores of 4-3 and 5-0 before about 600 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

Combined with a 3-2 victory in the second half of a Saturday doubleheader, the victories gave Vancouver a 3-3 record in games against the defending Canadian champions this season and moved the Magicians to within four-and-a-half games of the league-leading Bates.

Bates, who stretched a winning streak to 19 games with a 5-0 victory in Saturday's first game, could manage only 14 hits on the weekend, five of them coming from centrefielder Ken Bate.

Bate, who had three hits in Saturday's opener, stroked two sharp singles in the second game Sunday, the only hits allowed by veteran righthander Merle Johnson.

Former-Bate hurlers Ken Larson and Glen Langset combined to stop Bates on only three hits in the opener.

Bates will tune up for two games this weekend in Abbotsford and New Westminster by meeting the Sidney Men's League all-stars on Wednesday at Sanscha Park and will make their next home appearance June 26-27 against the U.S. national champions from Reading, Penn. in a four-game series at Royal Athletic Park.

Bates, Reading and the New Zealand national team share the world title following the championships held earlier this year at Lower Hutt, N.Z.

Strong city side seeks Virtue Cup

John Scofield of Alcos will captain a strong Victoria side which will attempt to regain the Virtue Cup in a two-day cricket match against a team of Vancouver Reps Saturday and Sunday at Vancouver's Brockton Oval.

One of the oldest continuing athletic competitions on the west coast, the annual series has been played since before the turn of the century and the Virtue Cup has been the winner's reward since the mid-1920's.

Others selected for this year's match are Steve Hanson and Mark Hillis, also of Alcos; Malcolm Shanks and Alec Porter of Albion; Jan Aten and Kortwright Richards of Oak Bay; Eric Kjekstad of Incogs; Howard Martin and Tim Lord of Cowichan; and Wallace Tait of Castaways.

Smith sidelined as pump seizes

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — Victoria's Roy Smith, who had worked his way up to 10th spot after starting 24th in a field of 35, was forced into the sidelines with about 110 miles to go when the oil pump on his 1975 Chevelle seized in the NASCAR Grand National Riverside 400 stock car race Sunday at Riverside International Speedway.

Smith, who had been running well after making his first pit stop in easy fashion after 80 miles of the 250-mile event, finished 27th overall in official standings.

David Pearson, who had the pole position on the starting grid, won his sixth Grand National race of the season by beating Bobby Allison by 1.6 seconds at a record average speed of 105.256 mph.

Pearson led the first four laps, dropped back and then regained the lead about halfway through the event.

Most of the early race was led by Cale Yarborough, who staged an exciting wheel-to-wheel duel with Allison before the motor on his vehicle went sour and dropped him well behind the pace.

The victory was the 93rd in 453 Grand National starts for Pearson, whose $15,150 in prize money brought his season earnings to $162,085.

NEW YORK (AP) — Lazy F Ranch's Forego, horse of the year the last two seasons, easily won the 21st running of the $55,100 Nassau County Handicap before a Sunday crowd of 34,138 at Belmont Park.

Mixed success for Islanders in Olympic track, field trials

MONTREAL — Vancouver Island athletes enjoyed considerable successs on the weekend at trials to determine Canada's track and field team for the Olympic Games in Montreal next month.

But it will be some time before the team is officially announced.

The Canadian Track and Field Association, which must submit names of potential Games competitors to the Canadian Olympic Association, has decided to send a long list and will request that no final decision be made before July 5, only 12 days before the Games are to commence.

Islanders winning their events on the weekend were hammer-thrower Murray Keating, sprinter Joyce Yakubowich, middle-distance runner Tom Griffin, all of Victoria, and javelin thrower Phil Olsen of Nanaimo.

Keating, who won his event Saturday with a heave of 67.08 metres, is still about two metres short of the Olympic qualifying standard, while Mrs. Yakubowich, winner of the 400 m. on Saturday, placed second to Vancouver's Marjorie Bailey in the 200 m. race Sunday.

Mrs. Yakubowich, running on an injured left ankle which is responding to treatment, was about half a second behind Mrs. Bailey, who covered the distance in 23.94 seconds.

Griffin ran the fastest 800 metres of his career and set a Canadian junior record with a clocking of 1:48.58, edging Dick Moss of Sudbury at the tape. Griffin still has to pass the Games standard of 1:47.2.

Olsen, who surpassed the Games standard while winning the NCAA championship last week for University of Tennessee, heaved the javelin 79.86 metres, more than five metres better than his nearest competitor.

Four other Islanders competed in Montreal but failed to reach qualifying times.

Dave Weicker of Victoria was a disappointing third in the 3000-metre steeplechase, finishing about 19 seconds behind winner Joe Sax of Toronto.

Graham Hutchinson of Courtenay did not finish the steeplechase.

Tim Page of Victoria finished fifth in his heat of the 100-metre dash and failed to qualify for the final and Tom Pink of Nanaimo did not finish in the final of the 110-metre hurdles.

CFTA president Diane Clement of Richmond said following the trials that several athletes have been improving rapidly in the last few weeks and "this is still early in the year for track."

"We've got meets in Europe and another here in Montreal at the end of June, and a lot of athletes who are very close to the Olympic entry standard," she said.

The heat of competition for available spots may well swell the numbers of Canada's track and field contingent beyond the 55 competitors predicted by officials as little as two months ago. It could be as high as 75 if some close cases are awarded spots.

Sailors and boxers earn Games berths

OLYMPIC REPORT

Larry Woods of Winona, Ont., and Hans Fogh of Toronto both clinched berths on Canada's Olympic sailing squad Monday.

At the Olympic sailing trials, Woods and crew Michael de la Roche turned in his seventh win in eight starts in the Tornado class, while Fogh and Evert Bastet had a second-place finish in the Flying Dutchman class. The placing was good enough to give them an unbeatable points total.

Fogh, 38, a naturalized Canadian, was an Olympic medalist when sailing for his native Denmark at Kiel in 1972 and Bastet, 26, filled in as a spare in four races at Kiel.

James Kidd of Brantford, finished second in the standings behind Fogh.

The two boats had duelled throughout the trials, with Kidd having the advantage in light airs and Fogh roaring back when the wind stiffened.

There was no report on the Victoria boat skippered by Bob Lewis, fourth over-all for most of the trials.

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's Olympic boxing team will consist of eight entrants instead of the 11-man squad sought by the Canadian Amateur boxing Association, Maurice Allan, chef d'mission for the Canadian Olympic team, said Monday.

Allan said that when the Canadian Olympic Association selection committee asked the CABA to indicate the size of its projected team last December, the boxing body had replied that if it could get six fighters on the team it would be happy.

Selected were: flyweight Ian Clyde of Montreal; featherweight Camille Huard of Quebec; light-middleweight Michael Provost of Montreal; light-welterweight Chris Clarke of Halifax; flyweight Chris Ius of Vancouver; welterweight Carmen Rinke of Lundbeck, Alta. and light-flyweight Sid McKnight of Prince George.

In addition, Cleveland Denny, three-time Canadian lightweight champion, was given COA approval. But Denny, now living in Montreal, still must get clearance from his native Guyana before he will be allowed to compete for Canada.

★ ★ ★

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain has named its smallest Olympic athletics team, 32 men and 23 women, since the 1956 Olympic Games in Melbourne, Australia.

There may still be an addition to the team of 55 if Ian Stewart fails to run a qualifying time for the 10,000 metres at the World Games in Helsinki on June 22-23.

Stewart, the former European and Commonwealth 5000-metre champion, has been named for the 5000 metres, but the selectors have left the third 10,000-metre berth vacant to allow him to prove himself.

The 27-year-old Birmingham runner, whose sister Mary is named for the women's 1500 metres, dropped out of the Olympic 10,000-metre trial Saturday with a blistered foot.

★ ★ ★

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Soviet athletics chiefs have added the 5000-metre race to the list of men's events in which the Soviet Union will not compete at the Montreal Olympics next month.

The Soviet Athletics Federation said during the weekend it will not send anyone to Montreal to compete in the men's 1500 metres and 3000-metre steeplechase because Soviet runners had no chance of success.

It will be the first time since the Soviet Union took the Olympic stage in 1952 that the country will not be represented at these distances.

MONTREAL (CP) — Olympic gymnasts will see action in a pre-Olympic rehearsal meet in the Montreal Forum July 13-14, the organizing committee for the 1976 games announced Monday.

All the athletes, including Russian aces Olga Korbut and Liumilla Turescheva, Nadia Comaneci of Romania, and Shigeru Kasamatsu and Mitsuo Tsukahara of Japan, will go through their Olympic routines during the dress rehearsal, committee officials said.

A stipulation that no judges be present "solves the problem of giving the teams a chance to work out at right under the exact conditions they will face in the games," said Walter Siebur, sports director for the organizing committee.

Canadians win

HALIFAX (CP) — Montreal's Liz Silcott scored 15 points to pace the Canadian women's Olympic basketball team to a narrow 59-54 win over France's national team Monday.

Wilkie, Curnow honored

Ken Wilke of University of Victoria Vikings was named an honorary member of the British Barbarians on the weekend following an international match between the touring team and the Canadian side in Toronto. Barbarians scored a 29-4 win.

Wilke is only the second Canadian so honored, Buzz Moore of Vancouver receiving the honor in the early 1960s.

Meanwhile, Jan Curnow of Victoria, the first Canadian to referee an international match outside of Canada, has been nominated for election to the International Panel of Rugby Referees. Curnow handled the weekend match in Chicago between France and the United States, won, 33-14, by France. French officials announced after the game they were nominating Surnow for the honor.

In Vancouver on the weekend, Ed Bryans of Victoria was elected president of the B.C. Rugby Union for a one-year term, Ray Calton of Victoria was returned as BCRU treasurer for another year and Ivor Ford of Cowichan was re-elected to a two-year term as director.

David took Goliath Monday night in the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League.

Kubicek's Home Service, winner only once previously, not only defeated league-leading Greaves Movers but turned in the season's first shutout.

It was by 6-0, and the honors go to Dale Aune, pitching a four-hitter for his first win of the season. He struck out only two but he walked only one, and two of the Greaves' hits were infield scratches in the first inning. Rob Parris got the other two hits for the losers.

Dave Wallace hit a double and two singles for Kubiceks, scoring twice and batting in a third run. Dave Graas did most of the other damage, hitting two doubles, driving in two runs and scoring twice.

Saints jump at NFL bargain

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Pittsburgh's problem quarterback, Joe Gilliam, was obtained by New Orleans Saints on Monday for the bargain waiver price of $100. The National Football League champion Steelers gave up on the 25-year-old quarterback, putting a player with star potential who could become one of the top passers in the league, on the waiver list. All other teams in the American Conference had cracks at picking him up for the waiver price of $100. They all passed.

In the National Conference, Seattle's new Seahawks were first in line. They passed. Then it came New Orleans' turn to exercise the option, and coach Hank Stram took him.

Why did Stram, with six other quarterbacks already on the payroll, add another?

"If he was just another quarterback, that question would be valid," said Stram. "But Joe Gilliam is one of the finest young quarterbacks in the National Football League. He helped contribute to two Super Bowl championships, and just two years ago we (Kansas City Chiefs) offered a No. 1 draft choice and another player for him."

Gandy nips Mick for first big title

Brian Gandy, who credited his caddy with the right kind of advice at the right time, won his first major tournament on Sunday.

The 25-year-old brewery worker, who plays out of Cedar Hill to a six handicap, settled down just in time to win the Victoria City amateur championship by a single stroke.

Gandy, who shared the first-round lead in the 36-hole tournament with clubmate Fred Worthington, Steve Allan of Gorge Vale and Mike Kolb of Royal Colwood by shooting 73 at Gorge Vale, matched that on the Victoria Golf Club links.

His 146 left him a stroke ahead of Gorge Vale's Dave Mick, who was the low scorer in the second round with 71 but couldn't quite make up for the 76 he shot on his home course.

Two over after six holes, Gandy drew even with par by making a 2-2-3 tour of "the point." Then he slipped again, and the skid became dangerous when he took a double bogey on the 13th. But he settled down to hold off Mick.

Gandy also had the low net total, 134, but the Matson Trophy went to Ian Seymour of Gorge Vale with tournament rules permitting only one prize for any player.

Grant Milliken of Gorge Vale and Jim Rutledge, who plays out of both Cedar Hill and Uplands, shared third place with 149. Colwood-veteran Laure Kerr, trying for a ninth city championship, shot 150 to tie Greg Barnes for fifth place.

City netters sidelined

Vancouver Western Indoor had a tough struggle Sunday before winning the right to represent this province in the Nestea Cup junior tennis championships.

Meeting Oak Bay at Island Indoor Tennis Centre, the Vancouver team posted a 4-3 victory by winning the final two games of the mixed doubles event.

The teams split the singles and doubles events evenly and the Oak Bay duo of Scott Braley and Nina Bland scored a 6-2 victory in the opening set of mixed doubles. Jim Lees and Karen Kettenacker came back for a 6-2 win and finished the event with a 7-5 decision.

In singles, Lees trimmed Braley, 6-0, 6-2, while Mike Geddes topped Peter Smythe of Oak Bay, 6-0, 6-1. Western Indoor won the doubles, 6-2, 6-3.

Nina Bland stopped Miss Kettenacker, 6-4, 6-3, while Jennifer Bland posted a 6-2 6-4 win over Leslie Romer. The Oak Bay sisters were 6-4 7-5 winners in doubles.

The B.C. champions will meet the Alberta champions in Calgary next weekend in the series leading to the Canadian final in Toronto later this year.

Softball roundup

Sandy sparks Combo win

Sandy Milliken climaxed a fine tournament performance Sunday, by pitching GSV Combos of the Victoria Senior Women's Softball League to a 3-2 win over Vancouver Emeralds.

Victory brought top honors in the 12-team tournament held over the weekend at Hyacinth Park. It was the third tournament win for Miss Milliken, who allowed a tournament total of only eight hits. Four of those came in the final game.

The Combo ace was named the tournament's top pitcher, teammates Linda Arnold and Pam Blatchford shared hitting honors, each with .545 averages, and catcher Star Atkins of Vancouver's Scaw Industries was selected as the most valuable player.

MacDonald's Furniture Seniors, also of the Victoria league, won the "B" division final, outscoring Port Alberni Chatwins, 8-6.

Weekend action in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League brought Port Angeles Telecable fourth place.

The U.S. team did no better than a split, but it made up four of the games it had in hand and the two victories gave it a 7-6 record and moved it up three notches in the league standing. Telecables were in against league-leading Royal Oak on Sunday, and came away with a 2-0 win in the opener, handing Ken Fox his first loss of the season. Royal Oak won the second game, 4-3, with Bob Bugslag hitting a homer, double and game-winner single to bat in three runs.

Saturday, Port Angeles split a doubleheader with Mike's Sporting Goods.

Two of the trailers tangled in the Monday game, and Juan de Fuca Builders came away with a 2-0 decision over Molsons.

Larry Cole pitched the shutout, allowing only three hits and striking out 14. Len Banner and George Graham drove in the runs.

Result moved the Juan de Fuca team into sixth place and left Molsons by themselves in eighth spot.

Harveys broke a tie for the lead in the Sidney Men's Softball League Monday night, moving two points ahead of Sidney Hotel with a 5-3 win over Travelodge. Roger Wallace pitched the victory, and Frank Scott helped him along with a home run.

Colwood golfers top tournament

Royal Colwood golfers dominated the Mr. and Mrs. tournament, held at the Royal Colwood Golf Club over the weekend.

Emery and Edna Wonora won low gross honors and Vic and Onaugh Painter retained the low net championship, and the runners-up were Don and Edith McCormick and Gord and Freda Munch of the host club.

Mary Reid of Royal Colwood and Doreen Ovcharik of Glen Meadows won the women's low gross and low net, respectively, and the individual leaders for the men were Ron Howard and Russ McFarlane of Royal Colwood. Sheila Morgan of Royal Colwood won the prize for being closest to the hole on the seventh, Pat Derry of Royal Colwood had the longest drive, and Royal Colwood won the team event.

Islanders on B.C. Reps

Seven Vancouver Island players have been named to the 21-member B.C. team for the inaugural junior national rugby championships, June 26-27, in Winnipeg.

Forwards Gary Grant of University of Victoria, Mike Reid of James Bay Athletic Association, Bob Tait of Castaways and Dennis Sinnott of Oak Bay and backs Ed McAuley of Castaways, Reg Moore and Bob Wright of UVic will join 14 other players from the lower mainland for the five-province event. Teams from B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario will participate in what is planned to be an annual tournament.

Golf bodies ordered to reinstate pro

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two professional golf associations have been ordered by a supreme court judge to restore golf professional Ronald Lawrence Willey of Vancouver to their membership after they suspended him for allegedly breaking an advertising rule.

Willey had sued the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association of British Columbia and the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association (CPGA) for damages on claims of a conspiracy to injure him by suspending him from the CPGA.

He claimed they sought to injure him by reprimanding him for advertisng the sale of golf equipment in a manner which purportedly violates the bylaws of that association, and by alleged concerted action to disrupt his supply of golf equipment.

Mr. Justice Kirke Smith held that Willey was entitled to an injunction which requires that he be restored to membership with all its rights and privileges pending the

Ram Shack captures Ruth title

Ram Shack Clothiers outscored Cedar Hill Nurseries, 3-1, Sunday at Layritz Park to win the 24-team Greater Victoria Babe Ruth Baseball League tournament.

All the scoring came in the first inning when Ram Shack scored three unearned runs.

John Langen threw a five-hitter for the winners and Brian Martin yielded only two hits in taking the loss.

Cedar Hill defeated Ram Shack, 2-0, in the 1975 final.

Both finalists are from the Gordon Head Cosmopolitan Babe Ruth League.

Cowichan Oak Bay post wins

Oak Bay and Cowichan were winners Sunday in the Victoria and District Cricket Association's annual 40-overs competition.

Oak Bay posted a three-wicket victory over Incogs while Cowichan topped Castaways by six wickets in a match at Shawnigan Lake.

Incogs batted first and were all out for 75, Jim Wenman scoring 32 runs. Oak Bay replied with 76 runs for seven wickets. Jan Aten counting 37 runs.

At Shawnigan Lake, Wallace Tair scored 68 runs and Steve Petzig added 34 as Castaways were all out for 174. Howard Martin scored 76 not out and Howard Dixon added 47 as Cowichan replied with 175 for four.

In a friendly match, a combined Alcos-Saanich team topped Courtenay-Comox by 21 runs. Alcos-Saanich were all out for 77 and Courtenay-Comox managed 56 runs.

Bush quits one position

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The resignation of Walter L. Bush Jr. as president of the National Hockey League's Minnesota North Stars was accepted Monday by the board of directors of Northstar Financial Corporation. The directors elected Gordon Ritz to succeed Bush, who was elected board chairman.

Bush, president of the team since 1966, said his re-election as vice-chairman of the NHL board of governors combined with the expansion of the league meant he would have to spend more time on league matters.

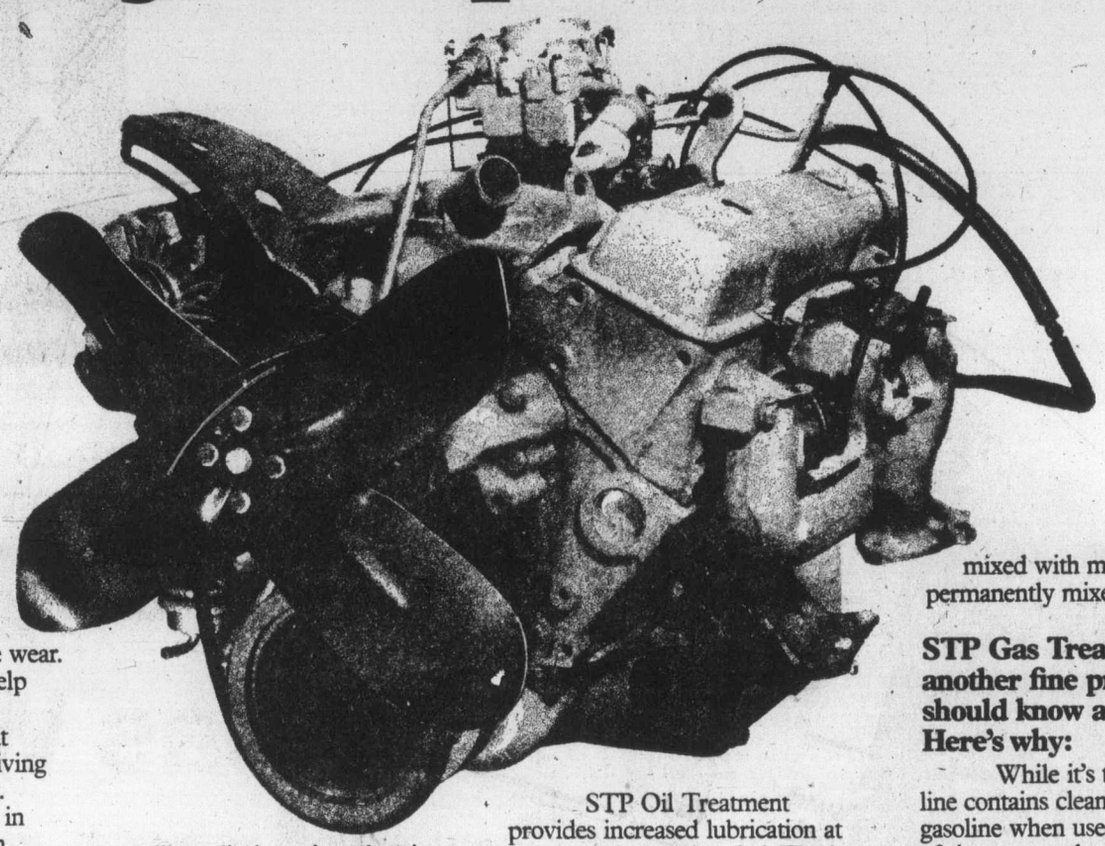
TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts have signed defensive back Ward Smith to their Canadian Football League training camp roster. Smith, who spent five seasons with Montreal Alouettes, was released by the Alouettes after a contract dispute.

This machine can wear a hole in your pocket.



The wear in today's car engines can cost you a bundle. But, STP Oil Treatment can help lighten the load by reducing the wear. And, STP Oil Treatment can help reduce oil consumption too.

A recent test proved that you get more value for your driving dollar with STP Oil Treatment.

The test was conducted in the U.S. with cars ranging from one with only 1,867 miles on it, to one with over 250,000 miles on it. A single and a multi-grade premium oil were used.

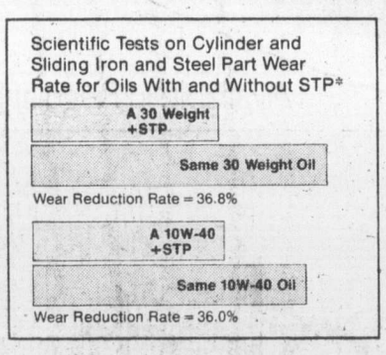
Each car was tested for two 6,000 mile oil change intervals without STP Oil Treatment. Then, the test was repeated using STP.

Professional drivers ran the cars through a range of speeds from stop-and-go driving to long stretches at 55 mph.

The following graphs and information are the results of that test.

STP Oil Treatment reduced the engine wear rate by an average 36.4%. Here's how:

It's a fact motor oil can lose effectiveness with use. Even a premium grade 10W-40 weight. This can happen because some of the important ingredients are depleted as you drive. And, that's where STP Oil Treatment can help.



Scientific Tests on Cylinder and Sliding Iron and Steel Part Wear Rate for Oils With and Without STP*
A 30 Weight +STP
Same 30 Weight Oil
Wear Reduction Rate = 36.8%
A 10W-40 +STP
Same 10W-40 Oil
Wear Reduction Rate = 36.0%

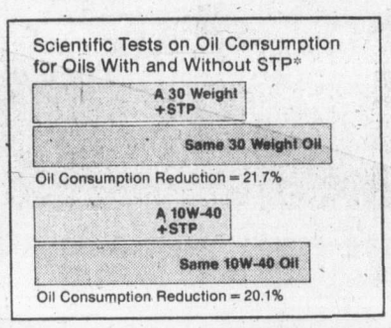
STP Oil Treatment fortifies, or toughens, motor oil. In doing so, it helps reduce the wear rate of lubricated sliding iron and steel parts, as well as parts containing copper and aluminum. Engine parts like cylinders, rings, bearings, cams and lifters.

STP Oil Treatment reinforces the oil's ability to withstand the abuse of friction and heat developed in a running engine.

Metal-to-metal wear is reduced. It's as simple as that.

STP Oil Treatment reduced oil consumption by an average 20.9%. Here's how:

The reason STP Oil Treatment reduces oil consumption is a simple one. It retards the oxidation of motor oil. Therefore, the test cars used less oil. No matter what the weight.



Scientific Tests on Oil Consumption for Oils With and Without STP*
A 30 Weight +STP
Same 30 Weight Oil
Oil Consumption Reduction = 21.7%
A 10W-40 +STP
Oil Consumption Reduction = 20.1%

Here's what the graphs mean: On the wear graph, for example, for every 1,000 miles driven, 64.8 milligrams of iron were worn away without STP in a 10W-40 oil, and 41.5 milligrams of iron were worn away with STP in the same 10W-40 oil. This is an average reduction in wear rate (calculated from parts per million of iron measured in the crankcase oil) of 36%. Of course, use of STP will not always result in a 36% reduction in wear rate. The results shown are averages for the test cars. Results for individual test cars varied. The actual wear and oil consumption results that you obtain may also vary depending upon the way you drive, driving conditions, the motor oil you use, your car's condition, model year and optional equipment. What these scientific tests show is that the use of STP Oil Treatment will help reduce wear and oil consumption.

STP Oil Treatment provides increased lubrication at the time it's most needed. That's because under the pressure of increased friction and heat build-up of a fast running engine, the long chain polymers in STP uncurl and expose more of the actual molecules' surfaces.

Also, oil treated with STP Oil Treatment drains off moving parts more slowly, leaving a film of lubricant on critical surfaces for a longer time when the engine is not running.

The time to use STP Oil Treatment is at every oil change. And, the first time you need oil.

In new or rebuilt engines, or engines in good condition, use one can of STP Oil Treatment per 4 or 5 quart crankcase. About 10%. In engines where oil consumption is high, use up to 20% of STP or two cans per crankcase. And, STP will not settle out of solution. Once mixed with motor oil, it remains permanently mixed in the solution.

STP Gas Treatment is another fine product you should know about. Here's why:

While it's true today's gasoline contains cleaning additives, no gasoline when used over a period of time can make a carburetor cleaner. Instead, when used, gasoline leaves deposits on the carburetor throat and other internal parts.

These gummy resins are by-products of fuel. They collect dirt that passes through the air filter down into the carburetor. Dirt that can have a serious effect on engine performance. Whether moving on a highway or idling at a stop light. Dirt that reduces engine efficiency and adds to fuel consumption.

And, that's where STP Gas Treatment can help. STP Gas Treatment can clean that dirty carburetor. And, keep it clean. It can help keep valves, spark plugs, PCV valves, and fuel systems clean as well. STP Gas Treatment also contains an effective anti-rust agent that provides protection against damages caused by moisture accumulating in the fuel system. And, it's as simple as adding one can of STP Gas Treatment to every tank of gas.

Also, STP Gas Treatment is safe to use with unleaded gas and has no effect on either the life or the catalyst action of catalytic converters. Very important.

It all adds up. Here's why:

Clearly, STP Oil Treatment and STP Gas Treatment are products right for the times. It's a simple matter of arithmetic when you consider that a car wash can cost more than a single can of STP Oil Treatment or Gas Treatment.

Think it over. With what your car costs you, shouldn't you get a run for your money?

A run for your money.

Vampires, Hornets gain final

It will be an all-Saanich final in the Junior Bantam Canadian Football Spring League playoff final on Sunday.

Saanich Vampires trimmed Oak Bay Crusaders, 49-40, on Sunday in a semi-final game at Cedar Hill Park while Saanich Hornets, bidding for a sixth playoff title in seven seasons, won by default over Juan de Fuca Tigers.

Rob Klee scored four touchdowns and added a two-point conversion for the Vampires and Scott Gordon and Mark Murphy each scored two touchdowns for Crusaders.

The Tigers and Crusaders will meet in the consolation final at 1 p.m. Sunday in Royal Athletic Park and the championship final will be played starting at 3 p.m.

Net series plans set

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — The first annual World Series of Tennis will be played here July 10-12, featuring Arthur Ashe, Manual Orantes, Bjorn Borg and another entrant to be determined. The $150,000 event will match the winners of the 1975 Wimbledon, United States Open and French Open and the 1976 Wimbledon Champion, to be crowned July 3. Ashe is the 1975 Wimbledon titleholder, Orantes, of Spain, took the U.S. Open and Sweden's Borg was the French Open winner.

The four contestants will be battling for a first-place prize of $75,000. The runner-up will receive $40,000 while the third-and fourth-place finishers will get $20,000 and $15,000 respectively.

Flames sign top choices

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Flames announced Monday the signing of their first three picks in the National Hockey League draft — defenceman David Shand and left-wingers Harold Phillipoff and Robert Simpson. Shand and Phillipoff were first-round choices in the recent junior league draft and Simpson was chosen in the second round.

Another playoff loss for Judy

TORONTO (CP) — Donna Caponi Young parred the first extra hole Sunday to defeat Judy Rankin in a sudden-death playoff of a $60,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Mrs. Rankin, leading money winner on the LPGA tour this year, bogeyed the par-five 475-yard 16th, and Mrs. Young sank a three-foot putt for par.

For Mrs. Young, an 11-year tournament veteran from Los Angeles, it was her first victory of the season although she finished first in the Australian Open — not a tour event — in March.

It was the sixth straight playoff Mrs. Rankin has lost over a two-year period and second in a two-week span. In a $76,000 tournament last week at New Rochelle, N.Y., she was involved in a four-way playoff with Pat Bradley, Bonnie Lauer and Sandra Post, former Oakville, Ont., golfer now residing at Boynton Beach, Fla. Miss Bradley defeated Mrs. Rankin on the second extra hole at New Rochelle.

The win was worth $12,000 to Mrs. Young, who also received the Peter Jackson Trophy. She forced the playoff with a five-under par 67 in the final round of the 54-hole tournament at the Cedar Brae Golf and Country Club.

Mrs. Rankin and Mrs. Young finished with 212 totals, four under par after three rounds of the 6095-yard course. Mrs. Rankin had a final round 70 and blew a one-stroke lead on the par-four, 360-yard 17th hole.

Mrs. Rankin, getting close to the LPGA money-winning record for one season, earned $6,500 to push her 1976 earnings to $79,275.

Joanne Carner holds the LPGA money-winning record of $87,094, which she set in 1974.

Murle Breer of St. Petersburg, Fla., finished third with 214. She earned $4,500.

Susie McAllister and Carol Mann shared fourth place with 215 totals.

The top Canadian was Miss Post, who wound up at 218 with a final score of 71. The best amateur for the second year in a row was Marlene Streit of Stoufville, Ont., who finished with 226 from scores of 76-72-78.

Keegan sparks England's win

HELSINKI (Reuter) — England lost an early lead but surged back to beat Finland, 4-1, in a World Cup European zone Group 2 soccer qualifying match Sunday.

Kevin Keegan tormented the Finns throughout and had a head or foot in three of the goals.

First title for Inman

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Joe Inman turned back the challenge of grim-faced Tom Weiskopf with a gritty, one-under-par 71 and acquired his first professional triumph Sunday in the Kemper Open golf tournament.

Inman, 28 and a longtime resident of nearby Greensboro, played a couple of great trouble shots on his way to a one-stroke victory with a 277 total — 11 under par on the 7160-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course.

The victory, his first in three years of tour activity, was worth $50,000 from the total purse of $250,000. It increased Inman's winnings for the season to $60,988.

Weiskopf, a two-time former Kemper champion, had a chance to tie it on the final hole but just missed on a 12-foot birdie putt and had to settle for second at 278 after a closing 70.

Grier Jones, the third-round leader, shared second place with Weiskopf after a closing 73 that included a one-putt par on the final hole.

It was another two strokes back to Charles Coody, U.S. Open champion Lou Graham, Roger Maltbie and J. C. Snead, tied at 280. Snead and Maltbie had 70s, Coodey and Graham 71s in the final round that was interrupted for 52 minutes by a thunderstorm and was played largely in a drizzling rain.

Mark Hayes bogeyed the last hole to drop into a three-way tie for eighth at 281. The bogey cost him a spot in the elite field for the new World Series of Golf. A par on the last hole would have given him enough points to claim the position that, instead, went to the absent Lee Trevino who was forced to withdraw from this event and will miss next week's U.S. Open due to an aching back.

Masters champion Ray Floyd shot 72—284 and Arnold Palmer had a 71—289.

George Knudson of Toronto carded a 75 for 292.

AIB man quits over profits

OTTAWA (CP) — A senior government economist has quit the anti-inflation board in a disagreement over new pricing and profit regulations to be made public today by the board.

The regulations, outlined in general form in the May 25 budget, are designed to plug loopholes and tighten the control over company profits.

The rules will be released in draft form and are to become effective in July, after a period to allow for consultation with industry and possible changes.

Normand Beaudoin, 34, a senior economist with Statistics Canada seconded to work with the board five months ago, asked to leave the board because he disagreed with the board's original plans for productivity formula to be included in the new rules.

Beaudoin's "termination of secondment" was submitted about 10 days ago and took effect last Friday. He was back at work Monday in the strategic planning division of Statistics Canada, where he has worked for nine years and was previously chief of a section dealing with research and analysis of productivity.

The productivity formula is to be used by companies in determining some aspects of how the rules apply to their profits.

Beaudoin said in an interview Monday he was generally satisfied with his position at the board but was in sharp disagreement with other board officials over the productivity formula they planned to use.

Beaudoin said that — as "a specialist in productivity" — he felt his proposal was more logical and practical and would be more fair to smaller companies than the competing proposals.

After arguing over the issue for about a month, Beaudoin said he used his termination as a last resort — "I hoped that people would take a serious look at it (the formula) if I terminated."

Beaudoin declined to discuss the issue in any detail until after the regulations are made public. Also, he said he has heard there were last-minute changes to the productivity formula finally chosen since he was involved.

Quebec judge finds case for charging Giguere

MONTREAL (CP) — Senator Louis Giguere will appear in court July 9 for setting of a preliminary hearing date into a charge of having illegally accepted benefits of $95,000 in connection with the Sky Shops affair.

Judge Maurice Rousseau of sessions court ruled at a pre-enquete Monday that while the facts presented to him were circumstantial, they nonetheless "presented a prima-facie case" against Giguere.

The pre-enquete — a type of closed-door inquiry used on occasion in Quebec — was launched April 26 to determine if the charge, under Section 110 of the Criminal Code, could be laid.

Judge Rousseau held the pre-enquete in camera to hear witnesses only. He even excluded Giguere's lawyer, Bruno Pateras, from the proceedings.

American condemns U.S. life

LUANDA (AP) — A former U.S. Marine sergeant on trial for his life as a mercenary testified Monday he "saw the light" in an Angolan jail and he condemned American society as a "monster of power seekers, status seekers, and waste-makers."

The Angolan prosecutor praised Gustave Grillo, an Argentine-born naturalized American, for his "truth and honesty." But the prosecutor cut Grillo off when the defendant said "reading a Cuban military magazine in prison" helped bring about his conversion.

Thirteen white mercenaries — 10 Britons and three Americans — captured in the closing days of the Angolan civil war as they fought for the losing pro-West side, are defendants in the trial in Luanda.

Grillo said that defendant Daniel Gearhart "never fired a shot" and that another American, Gary Acker, "never harassed or mistreated anybody."

Grillo attacked the CIA as "an institution of mercenaries that hires other mercenaries." He said the U.S. was "a place where they have restaurants for dogs, while you see people on the streets dying of hunger and cold in New York City."

Earlier Costas Georgiou, the "Colonel Callan" accused by other British mercenaries of ordering the massacre of 14 of his fellows, took full responsibility for everything charged against those he commanded.

Playboy rejects revived

Washington photographer Barry Blackman holds contact sheet of nude photographs of Elizabeth Ray and signed release, dated Sept. 16, 1972. Blackman told a news conference Monday he wants $20,000 to $25,000 for the photographs, submitted after the session to Playboy magazine and rejected. Meanwhile, Congressman Wayne Hayes, whom Miss Ray claimed hired her for sexual services, is in satisfactory condition after last week's sleeping-pill overdose.

Amin denies purge of Ugandans

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuter) — Ugandan President Idi Amin denied Monday there had been a purge of Ugandans following an attempt on his life and said none of his ministers had been arrested, Kampala radio reported.

The radio quoted the president as criticizing "false reports" which he said were being spread in Kenya. He said such reports were spoiling relations between Uganda and Kenya.

The president, addressing a seminar of administrators, was quoted as instructing officials to keep a lookout for Ugandans who might travel to Kenya to spread false rumors.

An exciting opportunity to participate in a wide variety of musical experiences, ranging from music for young children to chamber and solo study for experienced musicians.

Programmes include Suzuki piano, violin* and cello, Orff Rhythm classes, recorder and flute lessons with recorder consorts, opera, teacher training course, and master classes in piano, classical guitar and strings.

Visiting resident artists this year are:

Jack Rothstein (violin-U.K.), concertmaster and co-conductor of the Orchestra of the Academy of St. Martin's-in-the-Field, one of the world's leading orchestras.

Raphael Wallfisch (cello-U.K.), brilliant young cellist, a pupil of Piatigorsky, and soloist with many orchestras.

Linn Hendry (piano-Canada), distinguished soloist and chamber musician now living in England, a pupil of Robin Wood, John Lill, and Peter Katin.

Let us go, Germans ask Soviets

LONDON (UPI) — Soviet Germans as well as Soviet Jews are anxious to leave the Soviet Union because of attempts to suppress their culture and identity, according to a British television film smuggled out of Moscow.

An independent television program shown Monday included still photographs of Soviet Germans demonstrating outside their embassy in 1974, bearing placards saying, "Give us freedom to emigrate. We Germans want to go to Germany."

The program said some 20,000 of the Soviet Union's two million resident Germans, some of them descendants of 17th century settlers, have been granted exit visas in recent years — some after public protest campaigns. But, it added, others have been jailed.

Some 15 Germans are imprisoned, the program said.

It said Ludmilla Oldenburger, who chained herself and her three children to a pillar outside the Communist party's central committee headquarters, was given a two-year suspended sentence.

The Germans, transported to Siberia when Hitler marched on the Soviet Union in 1941, claim authorities are attempting to suppress their culture and identity, but their story has been virtually unreported, the program said.

Much of the story was told on film shot secretly in Moscow and smuggled out of the country.

Two Soviet Jewish dissidents were filmed in the back of a car to avoid police eavesdropping. They pointed out the scene of demonstrations by small groups of dissidents — Jewish, German, Ukranian, Tartar.

Anatole Sharatsky, a balding, 28-year-old Jewish dissident, told of the reaction of ordinary Russians to a Jewish demonstration in which he took part.

"First they are very puzzled by the fact that somebody has enough courage," he said. "Some are shouting, 'Send them to exile in Siberia . . .' but some people shout, 'Raise your slogans high, we want to see it.' "

He and two others interviewed said the pressure of public opinion in the West and Russia's need for trade links with Europe and the United States helped the dissidents'

Rider's condition fair after fall

Condition of a 23-year-old woman injured Sunday in a riding mishap has improved to fair from fair-to-poor.

Royal Jubilee Hospital reported that Ruth Barnes of Munns Road had improved slightly late Monday night.

Saanich police said the woman was riding when her horse was spooked by a barking dog in the 4900 block Prospect Lake Road at about 10:00 a.m.

The horse stumbled and fell, throwing the rider from her saddle and knocking her unconscious.

Twelve - year - old Lillian Stemkens of West Ridge Place, riding with the woman at the time, was also injured in the same incident when her horse bucked and jumped. Miss Stemkens suffered a back injury but was released after treatment at Royal Jubilee.

Ottawa signs pact with technicians

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has signed a one-year agreement with 2,900 electronic technicians giving them a 12-per-cent wage increase to a maximum of $2,400.

The contract agreement also provides the employees, represented by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, with improved standby pay and shift premiums.

Maximum annual pay for many of the technicians will be increased to $16,866 from $15,059.

The agreement, subject to review by the anti-inflation board, was reached by negotiations two weeks before the last contract expired May 16.

Deportation upheld

HAMILTON (CP) — Despite efforts on her behalf by local politicians and cultural groups, Maria Ortelia De Oliveira, a Portuguese interpreter, has been ordered deported.

The appeals on her behalf came about because of her hours spent as a voluntary interpreter in the Hamilton area.

The 38-year-old woman was ordered deported last January, but the order was deferred until the case was reviewed by Immigration Minister Robert Andras.

He has since indicated he has found the order valid.

"I think we've been most lenient in this case," Harry Haring, inquiry supervisor in the immigration office here said. "I don't know if we should have been."

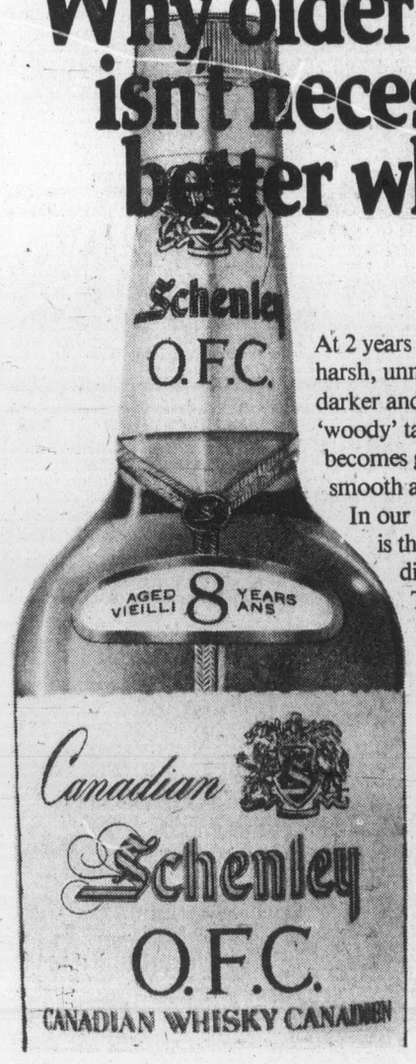
He said he would meet Miss De Oliveira this week to discuss what country she wishes to go to.

Although she is a Portuguese native, Miss De Oliveira is an Australian citizen having lived there for 15 years. She also worked for a year in England before coming to Canada last August.

She was charged last October with two offences under the Immigration Act. She was convicted in December of working without an employment visa and failing to report her change of status from visitor to worker. She was fined on each count.

Among those people trying to help her remain in Canada were Stuart Smith, Ontario Liberal leader, and John Munro, federal labor minister and MP for Hamilton East.

Why older whisky isn't necessarily better whisky.



At 2 years old Canadian whisky is pale, harsh, unmatured—and around 12 it's darker and beginning to take on a heavy 'woody' taste. In between this time, it becomes golden, mellow, smooth and full-bodied. In our opinion OFC is the prime Canadian whisky. That's why OFC is 8 years old and only 8 years old. The prime time for taste, try it.

Datsun's lowest-priced Space Vehicle!

F-10 Station Wagon only $3,995*

The new front-wheel drive Datsun F-10.

In their rush to make cars smaller and cheaper, a lot of companies will try to sell you a stripped-down model that looks like a wagon on the outside but sure doesn't work like one. Not Datsun. The F-10's rear door opens wide to reveal more than 50 cubic feet of luggage space. And because the F-10 has front-wheel drive, that space isn't cluttered with a drive shaft. You can use it all. There's plenty of legroom up front, too, because the F-10's engine is mounted sideways. There's nothing halfway about the F-10, it's a true, family-sized station wagon.

The F-10 Wagon is a true automotive value, as well. Even though it's Datsun's lowest priced wagon it comes fully equipped with rear window defogger, tinted glass, whitewall tires, carpeting, chrome window trim, console and package tray, wheel covers, rustproof fender liners, heavy duty battery and bumper overriders. In short, all the things you'd expect to pay extra for on a car in this price range. All in all, about $500 worth of extra-value features.

Like all the F-10's, this new wagon gives you the fine traction and safe handling of front-wheel drive. And, the 1976 E.P.A. tests show that the rally-proven 1.4 litre engine delivers up to 40 m.p.g. in combined city/highway driving. But, this might vary depending on the way you drive.

Datsun fights rust.

The new F-10 is built with the latest anti-rust techniques and materials. It starts, even before the car is built, with Zincrometal, a corrosion resistant metal. We use it in critical places where rust is apt to strike, like rocker panels and suspension members. Then, as the F-10 is assembled, we go on to apply rust preventative compounds and water resistant sealers to more parts of the car than you may have imagined. Rust-proof plastic liners in the front wheel wells add even more protection. When we're through, the F-10 has one of Canada's most up-to-date and comprehensive rust protection treatments, and it's all included in the price of every F-10.

All this value is built into a smartly styled station wagon that's waiting for you right now at your nearest Datsun dealer. In this day of "stripped down" economy cars, the fully-equipped F-10 is one of the best values on the road. See it soon.

Heart attack, injury cited in fireman pay case

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

The fireman, often pictured as a man of leisure, is actually facing a 50 per cent chance of job injury in any given year and may be running the risk of dying earlier than usual from heart disease.

This picture was presented Monday as the arbitration hearing of the Victoria local of the International Association of Firefighters entered its third day.

The 104 members of the local, trying to move toward parity with Vancouver firemen and those in numerous other B.C. centres, are seeking an 18 per cent wage increase in a one-year contract with the city.

According to earlier evidence, a fifth-year Victoria fireman earns $1,290 a month compared with $1,323 earned by his counterparts in Vancouver and Nanaimo.

Following up earlier evidence concerning the hazards faced by firemen, Saanich fireman Murray Bryden told the hearing Monday his department recorded 54 injury accidents over a 13-month period. This figure, he said, represented 61 per cent of the department's personnel.

The evidence was intended to show the situation was much the same as that established for Victoria and other departments throughout North America. Ross Cameron, president of the Victoria local, has said that, on a 12-month basis, accident figures represent about half the manpower of any department.

Under cross-examination by chief city negotiator Carl Anselm, Bryden couldn't say how many of the Saanich firemen required medical treatment or qualified for workers' compensation.

He did say, however, that accidents during the fighting of fires were "quite a common occurrence" and that a fireman had to be on constant guard against hazards "because he knows he could be injured at any given time."

Also introduced as evidence was a report by Dr. Dominick Davolos, associate professor of clinical medicine at the University of Cincinnati college of medicine, indicating firemen are more prone than others to heart and lung disease.

In his report, the doctor says evidence has reached the point where it "can no longer be ignored and there is a high degree of probability that the professional firefighter is at significant increased risk."

His report dealt only with American firemen and noted that New York State firemen have a life expectancy eight years less than the average male, mainly because of heart disease.

Davolos says extreme environmental, emotional and physical stresses are among the reasons for heart disease in firemen.

Lack of oxygen in fighting fires showed an effect on the hearts of otherwise healthy young firemen, the report says.

Anselm found it interesting that the doctor was medical adviser to the John P. Redmond Foundation of the International Association of Firefighters. He was unable to ascertain through questioning whether the doctor might have been paid for his report.

The report was entered by Terry Erksine, who is attached to the Saanich fire department's heart unit — 16 first aid firemen who are qualified to detect various heart problems and administer necessary drugs.

The Victoria firemen want extra payment for men trained in first aid, although they do not operate ambulances like those in Saanich.

Mediator John Davie, who said Friday he didn't feel he could relate Vancouver pay rates to any award he may make in the Victoria case, told the hearing Monday he thought he had since discovered a means of doing so.

Anselm said he was "a little disturbed" by the remark and didn't feel the mediator should make any decision until all the evidence was completed. Davie assured him this wouldn't be the case, and while he might consider the Vancouver agreement, the Victoria award wouldn't necessarily be the same.

Comox Queen, currently undergoing refit, belongs to highways department and runs between Comox and Powell River.

Oak Bay rezones land despite developer's suit

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

In spite of pending court action, Oak Bay council moved Monday night to amend zoning requirements for seven apartments in the Willows Beach area.

New regulations given hurried final reading decrease the site coverage allowed for two or three-storey buildings from 28 to 20 per cent, and allow only 10 units an acre.

A packed public hearing applauded council's efforts, but applicants for a building permit for one of the properties boycotted the hearing.

Monarch Holdings Ltd., which had caused the initial revival of the Willows Beach Association to protest further development in the area, has gone to court for delivery of a building permit.

In a letter to council, lawyer Allan Cox said the building permit application made to council April 20 was complete and in accordance with zoning bylaws.

"Under the circumstances our clients had no alternative but to instruct us to take proceedings in court to require the delivery of the permit to which they are entitled," the Cox letter said.

The letter noted that in June 1973, all existing apartment buildings were exempted from the single-family zoning which covers the rest of the area.

"In good faith our clients prepared at considerable expense their plans for development and applied for their permit as indicated above.

"Instead of issuing the permit, which our clients are entitled to under the existing zoning, you have introduced Bylaw 3148, the effect of which is obvious."

Cox claimed in his letter that the bylaw is specifically designed to negate Monarch Holdings' legal right to a building permit.

Council was inundated with 44 letters, 354 protest coupons and a 50-signature petition supporting preservation of the Willows Beach area.

And there was no shortage of speakers at the public hearing.

Willows Beach Association spokesman Richard Kilshaw said developers simply wanted their own way, with maximum profits.

"They want their pound of flesh, their long ton," he said.

He said the association had approached the developers to see if they would consider an offer from the association and other interested people to buy the property.

The developer was not interested in an offer, although it would have been made on the understanding that the property be turned over to the municipality for use as a park.

He said he felt the municipality along with the Capital Improvement District Commission and other government bodies, should consider purchasing the property.

The association, he said, was not prepared to sit by and watch the finest seashore in Greater Victoria sliced up piecemeal.

Support for his stand came from several speakers.

At issue was the rezoning of seven apartment properties.

Three years ago, when development threatened the area, council zoned the entire area down to single-family dwelling, leaving the existing apartment zoning with only the apartments already built.

In April Monarch Holdings applied for a permit to tear down Uplands Lodge on Thorpe Place and replace it with a new apartment block.

Victoria trustees favor system

Job choice via computer

Greater Victoria school trustees indicated Monday night they are interested in a computer counselling service.

Trustees agreed at a committee meeting to take two motions to next Monday's regular board meeting regarding counselling.

The first motion was to write letters to the provincial education department and the federal manpower and immigration department expressing interest in a computer program titled C.H.O.I.C.E.S.

The second motion was to find out what the costs would be to instal the system in junior and senior high schools.

C.H.O.I.C.E.S. is a computer-assisted counselling process developed by the manpower and immigration department's occupational and career analysis and development branch.

The system would store most or all of the 6,700 major job classifications, which could be further broken down into 22,000 specific jobs, and would be made available to students wishing to find what jobs are available.

Such information as wages, educational and physical requirements and employment potential would be provided after students program their questions into the computer.

The service would make the decision of picking a career far easier, the trustees were told.

The federal department undertook the task of providing more adequate occupational information and the result was the computerized C.H.O.I.C.E.S. program, which will be available to the Vancouver school district on a pilot-project basis in the spring of 1977.

If successful, the service would be made available to other districts in the fall.

All three school districts in the Victoria area, Greater Victoria, Saanich and Sooke, as well as Camosun College and the University of Victoria expressed interest in the project by attending a meeting on Dec. 4, 1975, at which a federal official stressed that good initial counselling was required as well as effective follow-up in the interpretation of the printout which counsellors and students receive.

Greater Victoria trustees were told Monday night that the cost of having a computer terminal in each school may reach $3,000 by the time the system is operational.

Village stores may be saved

Those four small stores on the southwest corner of Oak Bay Avenue and Monterey may not have to move after all, even if the Bank of Montreal is allowed to build on the site.

On Monday night, Oak Bay council approved in principle an offer from builder Danclair Developments which would accommodate the stores, provide a new banking building, and go some way toward solving the parking problem.

Oak Bay had erupted in a furor over the proposed demolition of a dress store, meat market, bakery and grocery store to make way for a new bank building.

And council had been under pressure to ensure that the village maintained its character with small stores in easy reach of residents.

The latest proposal from Danclair is for alteration of the corner three stores so they could be occupied by a bank and dress store.

The meat market and bakery could be accommodated in the present Bank of Montreal building, leaving the grocery store.

Danclair, council was told, is prepared to enter negotiations for a satisfactory settlement of that question.

Since renovations would not provide required additional parking, Danclair is prepared to contribute up to $60,000 toward development of a municipal parking facility.

The matter has gone back to committee for consideration of a land-use contract for the project.

Council bubbles at tennis plan

A half-million-dollar project will give Oak Bay tennis players seven new courts, four of them under a "bubble."

Council decided Monday night to go ahead with the project in spite of the objections of Ald. Douglas McLelland who wondered if such a large sum of money should be spent in this way, at this time.

McLelland said a lot had been made of an expected $100,892 grant from the provincial recreation fund.

But, he said, council would have to pay $82,000 interest on a short-term loan for the project, making the grant worth approximately $19,000.

Although there is an agreement with the school board to build the courts, which will be adjacent to Oak Bay junior high school, he felt the board would understand the need for spending restraint.

Ald. Douglas Watts said irrecoverable money had already been spent on the project, which is the last of the planned recreation capital expenditures.

He felt council should follow through, and then sit back and concentrate on upkeep and maintenance.

The project includes a culvert for Bowker Creek, with the courts to be built over the culverted area.

Victoria Paving has won the contract and of the $500,000 total cost, $330,000 will go for four courts under a "bubble," a further three courts and parking for 40 cars.

Smith after funds for seawall plan

Mayor Brian Smith will be approaching the Capital Improvement District Commission next week to see if that body will foot the bill for a combined seawall and esplanade at Shoal Bay.

The plan, approved by Oak Bay council Monday night, calls for a westward extension of an existing seawall and esplanade from Oliver Street to the intersection of Beach Drive and King George Terrace at an estimated cost of $227,691.

A second-stage continuation of the proposal would take the wall to the Sunny Lane steps at an estimated cost of $221,349.

Ald. John Goult protested, saying he saw no need for concrete in the area.

Ald. Douglas Watts said the shore is muddy and subject to erosion.

Council was also told that consideration of a proposed sewage pumping station at the other end of the bay near McMicking Point should be deferred until July 6, at 5:15 p.m.

Ald. Shirley Dowell will be visiting municipal pumping stations in Seattle in the meanwhile to study the impact on residential areas.

Council received four letters about the station — three supporting the proposed site, and one opposing it.

Building delay approved

North Saanich council passed a resolution Monday aimed at holding up construction of the Sangster farm property at Mills Cross Road and West Saanich Road.

Building permits for the subdivision planned by Sav-More Builders Centre will be withheld for 30 days from the date they would otherwise be issued to give the municipal solicitors a chance to study the development's effects on North Saanich's community plan.

Solicitors have also been asked to report on the possibility of municipal control over well drilling and council's committee A will study ways to control the Sangster farm development.

Esquimalt 'master plan'

Road-up pledge

Esquimalt residents may be able to say goodbye to the endless cutting up of their streets.

All service work requiring cuts in the pavement is to be done in conjunction with a proposed program for repaving throughout the municipality.

In a report to public works committee Monday, municipal engineer M. H. Campbell said he received support for co-ordination of projects from B.C. Hydro and B.C. Telephone.

The same report pointed out that sewer, water, gas and phone services cannot be placed in the same trench owing to potential health and safety problems.

The report was prepared after the committee became concerned over the number of pavement cuts made at various times for services, particularly as the municipality was implementing a repaving program.

Council has allotted almost $75,000 for repaving this year and the work is expected to start over the summer in the area's worst roads.

CUPE probe time limited

The Lindholm industrial inquiry commission, charged with bringing down a binding settlement in the school-civic labor dispute here, will require an extra week to 10 days to complete its work, commission chairman Louis Lindholm of Victoria said Monday.

Water query just a refresher

Sidney council voted Monday to give a friendly nudge to Hugh Curtis' memory.

Curtis, as provincial minister of municipal affairs, met with the mayors of Sidney, North Saanich, and Central Saanich about two months ago to discuss water problems on the Saanich Peninsula.

He promised the mayors then that he would arrange a meeting with representatives of the several Peninsula water boards to try to sort out those problems.

But so far, nothing has happened.

At its meeting Monday, Sidney council decided to remind Curtis of the promised meeting by asking him for the meeting date.

Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm is hoping Curtis will consolidate Peninsula water boards under one authority, or in some way wrest control of Peninsula water from Central Saanich, so a hook-up can be made with the Greater Victoria water board's supply.

He said he wants "the provincial government to do something because we can't do it ourselves." The three municipalities have, according to custom, been unable to agree, and they need someone "to smarten us up," he said.

He pointed to Campbell River and Nanaimo as precedents for provincial involvement.

The question of giving responsibility for Peninsula water to the Capital Region board has been tabled by that board's public works committee, and Malcolm told council he is in favor of letting it stay tabled.

Both the Greater Victoria water board and the public works committee seem to be opposed to regional influence in water matters, he said. He also feared that, if the question came out of committee and to the regional board, Curtis would feel obliged to wait until the board had acted before making any provincial moves.

Elderly bus-fare probe set

Transport Minister Jack Davis promised Monday to investigage bus fares being charged the elderly on the Monday-to-Thursday free ferry rides.

He was answering a question by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) who claimed that on free ferry days persons 65 and over were being exploited by the bus company running the ferry shuttle.

The company, Pacific Stage Lines, is owned by the government.

Under-65s travelling by bus from Vancouver to Victoria or vice-versa pay a total price of $6.25. Of that, $4 is their ferry fare, $2.25 their bus fare.

Those 65 and over making the same trip are charged $3.50 for the bus ride but ride the ferry free.

"In other words, senior citizens are paying $1.25 more for the same bus ride, and that shouldn't be so," Macdonald said.

During the same question period, Karen Sandford (NDP—Comox) asked is Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair intended to do anything about the latest food price increases.

Mair answered, "No."

Last week, bread, chicken and turkey prices all showed substantial increases.

Mair did hint that the government might be planning some action on rising food prices, but said he had no intention of discussing government policy.

Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) wanted to know what the government was doing to avert potential disasters such as the incident at Colwood last Friday when a fairground ride caught fire.

Labor Minister Allan Williams said the safety of fairground rides came under the jurisdiction of the Factories Act, which in turn came under his authority.

"Several weeks ago I requested a report on how we could tighten up safety regulations on rides at fairs," he said. "I should be in receipt of that report soon."

He promised to act on the report.

Lorne Nicolson (NDP—Nelson-Creston) wanted to know if Williams sat on the board of directors of Swan Valley Foods, a government-controlled food-processing operation.

Williams' answer was "Yes." Nicolson gave no explanation for the question.

New chief for crown corporation

Ray Jones, 66, has resigned as president of British Columbia Cellulose after 2½ years with the government-owned company.

Forest Minister Tom Waterland said Jones would remain on the job for several weeks to provide liaison for his successor, then take accumulated leave which would carry him to his 67th birthday in September.

Waterland said Jones had "done an excellent job" presiding over the company and had been asked to continue to serve on the board of directors of Canadian Cellulose Company, Kootenay Forest Products and Ocean Falls.

B.C. Cellulose owns 79 per cent of CanCel shares and all the shares of Kootenay Forest Products. Ocean Falls operates separately from the other two, but is also owned by the crown.

A new president for B.C. Cellulose will be announced later this week.

Thai warplane crash mystery

BANGKOK (UPI) — A Thai air force warplane crashed deep in insurgent-held territory north of Bangkok, military sources said Sunday. The sources said the plane went down late Friday afternoon in Petcharun province, about 200 miles north of Bangkok. Reports conflicted on whether cause of the downing was communist ground fire or engine failure.

Williams orders hands off B.C. Rail

Former lands, forest and resources minister Ray Williston will not be appointed to the B.C. Railway board of directors.

Reports that he would become the new president have been circulating for some months, but Labor Minister Allan Williams squelched it in the Legislature Monday, although he did not mention Williston by name.

Speaking during second reading of the Railway and Ferries Bargaining Assistance Act, Williams said there would be no more political interference in the direction of the railway.

A new board of directors for the railway, he said, would be made up of people capable of managing the railway in a business-like way.

"B.C. Railway will be run by railroaders, not by politicians," Williams said.

"There will be no politicians — and no ex-politicians — on the board of directors."

Williams' statement apparently means that Transport Minister Jack Davis and Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips will be moved off the board.

Bargaining act gets quick passage

B.C. Rail strike forced to end

The B.C. Railway will be back in operation Thursday morning after passage Monday of the Railways and Ferries Bargaining Act.

The Legislature sat for 50 minutes past normal adjournment to take the bill through second reading, clause-by-clause scrutiny, third reading and proclamation all in one afternoon.

The bill imposes binding arbitration on the United Transportation Union in its dispute with BCR.

Of the other seven unions involved with the railway, four have already settled and three have agreed to binding arbitration.

The bill allows 48 hours for the railway to resume normal operations. It came into force at midnight.

The bill was introduced in the house last Wednesday evening and Labor Minister Allan Williams had hoped for passage Thursday. The NDP, however, used rules of order to keep the measure off the floor over the weekend.

However, Monday saw a more co-operative mood, and second reading went through with only one speaker for each party. On division, second reading was approved 27-17.

The house moved quickly through clause-by-clause scrutiny, having agreed to sit through until the act was proclaimed although the opposition could have insisted on adjournment at 6 p.m. There was no division on third reading which gained unanimous approval.

Labor Minister Allan Williams and the former labor minister William King agreed on one thing during second-reading debate.

On opposite tacks for the most part during discussion of the bill, they both berated UTU spokesman Glenn Bowles for attacks against industrial inquiry commissioners.

King said such attacks against a third party bringing in an unbiased report were "absolutely unprofessional."

He said that in the past both management and union representatives had, on separate occasions, made public attacks upon a third party who had done a good job.

"That is regrettable and an indication of their ineptitude," King said.

Such attacks should cause the people whom the spokesmen represented to examine their credentials, he said.

King had appointed Jack Sherlock a commissioner in 1975, and Bowles had asked for the withdrawal of that appointment and had attacked the manner in which he had made his investigation.

Williams appointed Mr. Justice Craig Munroe earlier this year in a similar role, and he, too, was attacked by Bowles.

"You may recall that I also expressed my sense of outrage at the remarks which Mr. Bowles had made and solicited an apology from him. That apology was never forthcoming," Williams said.

Williams said the legislation had two purposes.

The first used binding arbitration to bring an end to the existing dispute between UTU and BCR. That section was to expire when normal rail operations were restored, he said.

The second part of the bill dealt with long-range objectives.

It provided for 90-day cooling-off periods in future disputes on either the railway or the ferry service, he said.

If the government did enforce a cooling-off period, it would also appoint a special mediator to mediate the dispute, and, if that failed, to recommend methods for the resolution of the dispute.

The mediator, he said, would be able to recommend various remedies, including fact-finding, so that personality, situations and rhetoric would no longer be substituted for fact and reason.

There was provision for the fact-finding report to be published as necessary, he said. Other choices available included arbitration, final offer selection, mediation to finality, or a combination.

King said the first part of the bill was redundant, because the minister already had authority under the Labor Code of B.C. to appoint a special commission to inquire into labor problems.

"I wonder why part one is before the house at all," King said.

"I find that language in part one appears to remove from the realm of collective bargaining some of the issues that traditionally have been on the table, and wonder if this is one of the reasons for drafting this section."

For instance, he noted that under the bill, the right of employees to retroactive pay had been eliminated.

King said he had always felt that government intervention in labor disputes should only be on an ad hoc, or one-shot basis, with a tailor-made remedy for a specific situation, not on a continuing basis.

The knowledge that government would intervene in a dispute took away the possibility of union and management making their own agreements, since they knew that if they were to "hang tough," government would "get them off the hook."

King questioned the advisability of having ferries in the bill at all.

"There is no strike on the ferries right now," he noted. "It flies in the face of propriety for the minister to come in and report that he had an agreement with union and management for no interruption in ferry service for 30 days, and then to come in and drop a far-reaching bill that ties them in with the railway people," said King.

"That might be viewed as an act of bad faith when they had given the minister an undertaking."

King said that while he could have supported a bill simply to deal with the present railway situation, he considered it "improper and ill-advised of the government to seize the opportunity for continued intervention and curtailment" of the rights of management and unions to use lockout or strike action.

Gordon Gibson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) suggested that the government should try to set up a system of joint labor-management control of the railroad, which could lead the way in a co-operative decision-making process.

He said productivity had to increase to justify the high wages and standard of living of B.C. workers.

Every worker, he contended, could suggest ways to increase productivity, and they should be heard on the board of directors.

He supported the bill.

Scott Wallace (PC—Oak Bay) said the new bill was an improvement on the earlier bill brought in by the government to deal with B.C. Railway.

The impression had been developing in the province that the Social Credit government had been prepared to act in a punitive way against unions.

"Within the last few weeks we have had a very strong punitive measure proposed and now within a relatively short time the government seems to have either backed off or recognized that its initial ideas were a form of excessive government action and would have very serious long-term effects," said Wallace.

Rhodesia strife

Guerillas slay another white

SALISBURY (UPI) — A white farmer died during an attack on his farm by black nationalist guerrillas in Rhodesia's northeastern Matepatepa region, a security forces communique said Monday.

The interior ministry announced plans to build more "protected villages" — blacks-only compounds fenced by barbed wire and sealed off from dusk to dawn — in the northeast, where many guerrillas have entered Rhodesia from Mozambique.

Frank Pitcher, 47, was the sixth white civilian killed by guerrillas in the past nine days, and the 29th to die since the guerrilla war on the Mozambique border began in December, 1972.

The communique did not say when the attack took place but military sources said Pitcher was killed in the past 24 hours.

Rhodesian forces killed five insurgents and shot dead an African tribesman for curfew violations in the past 24 hours, the communique said. At least 30 blacks have been shot and killed after curfew this year.

Premier Ian Smith scheduled an appearance on national television late Monday to announce details of a new program to ease racial segregation, government officials said. He also was to discuss the escalating guerrilla campaign and Rhodesia's response that this month saw 64 guerrillas killed in actions. The guerrillas are seeking to overthrow Smith's white minority regime.

Smith returned from a conference in Pretoria Sunday night with South African Prime Minister John Vorster — a meeting that aides said was in preparation for Vorster's encounter on June 23 and 24 with U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger in Hamburg, West Germany. No details of the Vorster-Smith talks were released.

Patrol plane plan 'too sophisticated'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative military critic says the federal government should abandon plans to acquire a highly sophisticated patrol plane designed to do two jobs.

Allan McKinnon of Victoria said in an interview Monday the government should seek one plane for anti-submarine work and another for northern sovereignty patrols.

The first could be an off-the-shelf Lockheed Pc3 and the second a Dash-7, the short-takeoff-landing (STOL) aircraftb eing developed by the crown-owned de Havilland Aircraft of Toronto. There also could be other combinations.

McKinnon, long-time critic of what the opposition calls government bungling in the now-defunct $1-billion Lockheed Orion deal, was answering questions on what the government should be doing to acquire a patrol plane to replace the Arguses that are due to go out of service at the end of this decade.

He said he believed the government should give up thoughts of one aircraft jammed with equipment to do everything from searching for submarines in the North Atlantic to watching Soviet scientists on Arctic iceflows.

That requirement by the government drove the price of the Lockheed Orion LRPA (for long-range patrol aircraft) to the almost $1-billion figure.

Instead, the government should first consider a Lockheed P3C anti-submarine aircraft, the one used by the United States Navy.

Or it could look at submissions from The Boeing Corp. and its 707, 727 and 737 jets and the British Hawker Siddeley group with its Nimrod.

If these proved inadequate, then the government should look elsewhere, and consider refitting the Arguses to include pressurized cabins, necessary for computers, and new engines as well as new electronics.

The Dash-7 or some other aircraft would be used for northern sovereignty work and would not require costly anti-submarine equipment.

McKinnon said he had confidence that the management of de Havilland could produce a plane to satisfy Canadian sovereignty requirements.

He said it appeared that the turbo-prop P3C is the best off-the-shelf anti-submarine aircraft available, cheaper to operate than jets which have high fuel consumption at low levels and speeds.

Under his proposal, Canada would take delivery of a few planes at a time and pay for them. The aircraft, would have as much made-in-Canada electronics as possible.

It paid puffers to dump habit

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Five employees of a glass firm here quit smoking and received a combined cash reward of $1,440 from the firm. Last year the employees agreed to quit smoking and let the company deduct from their pay cheques the amount they would have spent on cigarettes. The company matched the deductions with an additional $1,440.

Value school not 'in-dispute'

VANCOUVER (CP) — An "in-dispute" designation of teaching positions at Georges Vanier elementary school in nearby Surrey has been lifted by the British Columbia Teachers' Federation. President Bill Broadley said the action by the BCTF executive committee followed rescinding June 7 of a motion by the Surrey school board to have the school declared a "fully-implemented value school."

Work of death squad indicated in shootings

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Police discovered Monday the bodies of four men and two women who had been shot repeatedly then burned in a field south of Buenos Aires.

The slayings had the same characteristics as other killings by rightwing death squads, including the official silence surrounding it.

Police sources said persons believed to be leftist guerrillas shot and killed an agronomist as he left his home in the Flores district of Buenos Aires, but they could not find any motive for killing.

Leftist guerrillas Sunday killed a retired navy officer, Lt. Cmdr. Jorge Bigliardi, as he left his home in La Plata, 35 miles southeast of Buenos Aires.

Right and leftwing guerrillas and anti-guerrilla action by security forces, have cost 453 lives this year.

Meanwhile, 25 political exiles who were kidnapped, tortured and ordered to leave Argentina within 48-hours or be killed, were seeking political asylum in some other country after the deadline passed.

Non-smokers keep fighting

By DAVID LAMB
Colonist-Los Angeles Times

MINNEAPOLIS — Ever since the Aztecs stuffed tobacco into a hollow reed and lit up the world's first cigaret 450 or so years ago, non-smokers have been fighting for their right to breathe air untarnished by tar, nicotine, carbon monoxide, ammonia, benzene, formaldehyde and hydrogen sulphide.

The first Romanov czar fought for his right by slitting smokers' noses as punishment, the Turkish Sultan Murad IV for his by executing as many as 18 smokers in a single day. The colonial assembly in Connecticut tried to purify its air in 1643 by prohibiting smoking outdoors unless a person was on a journey of 10 miles or more and much later Utah, Kansas and North Dakota banned smoking entirely.

But the trouble was, none of these prohibitions were very effective, not even as effective as Minnesota's tough new anti-smoking law which one disgruntled traveller responded to recently by grinding his cigar butt on an airport ticket counter and announcing: "Last time I'll ever come into this damn state."

History shows that the Russians kept smoking, their noses generally intact. So did the Turks and the North Dakotans. And last year — 11 years after the Surgeon General officially termed smoking a health hazard, five years after tobacco products disappeared from television commercials, three years after the government suggested that second-hand smoke may be harmful to non-smokers — 60 million Americans puffed their way through a record 610 billion cigarets, thus enabling the tobacco industry to maintain once again its steady 2-3 per cent annual growth.

Although non-smokers have won some notable victories in the 1970s, the evidence was sufficient to make many realists concede defeat. The National Cancer Institute announced it was sponsoring research to produce less hazardous cigarettes after urging Americans for years not to smoke, period. The president of the American Cancer Society admitted any all-out attack on smoking would lack public support and fail. And Minnesota last month issued 16 pages of clarifying regulations to its clean-air legislation, which has caused more controversy than anything in the state since the Sioux Indian uprising of 1862.

Unlike other states where smoking has been banned in specific areas like elevators or theatres, Minnesota says smoking is illegal in all public places and public meetings. The only exception is in specially designated "smoking areas"

Restaurants, accordingly, must provide no-smoking tables, hospitals no-smoking wards, offices no-smoking desks. Only in bars can smokers puff away at will without fear of being liable for a $100 fine.

Predictably, the law has caused some inconveniences.

In the state health department, desks have been re-arranged so the 500 employees sit in clusters of smokers and non-smokers, generally separated by file-cabinet barricades. In the state legislature, the law had to be waived on an least one occasion so the smoking representatives would stay in their seats for a crucial late - night debate, rather than hurrying off the floor for a smoke.

And Martin Sabo, the two-pack-a-day Speaker of the House was one of the first to comply with the law: he pasted a "smoking allowed" sign over two of the four chairs in the waiting area outside his office. "Thank goodness my boss is a smoker," said Sabo's secretary, Edith Snell, who has a similar sign near her typewriter.

The police department, understandably, has been reluctant to devote much energy to the law, usually ignoring it, occasionally asking an offender to extinguish his cigaret. "Most of the people are very gracious when you ask them to put out their cigarets," said James Pixley, chief of security at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport. "Of course, there have been some others who have told us what we can do with the law and the state."

The American Lung Association, which has played the leading role in pushing for non-smokers' rights in Minnesota and other states, says its efforts are pro-non-smoking, not anti-smoking. Spearheading the association's movement are a number of small, vocal groups flourishing around the country: GASP (Group Against Smokers' Pollution), ASH (Action on Smoking and Health), ANSR (Association for Non - smokers' Rights) and SHAME (Society to Humiliate, Aggravate, Mortify and Embarrass Smokers).

"In a way these adversaries did us a favor," said William Kloepher Jr., senior vice president of the Tobacco Institute in Washington, D.C. "They provide us with the forum, the means of communicating directly with the public on behalf of the industry and believe me, we've been taking advantage of that."

The institute, with a staff of 36, including seven lobbyists, and a budget it will not disclose, speaks for an industry which produces 145 brands of cigarets. It claims that smoking is not a hazard to healthy non-smokers and any discomfort to non-smokers should be cured with smokers' courtesy, not laws. To get its message across — and to ensure that smoking speakeasies aren't the next step — it has four speakers on its staff who tour the country, holding news conferences, appearing on talk shows, speaking to civic groups.

Kloepher points out that the tobacco industry is perhaps the only one in which the users of a product, rather than the product itself, are the target of an opponent's attack. But to those who ask, he offers an historically safe prediction about the future of the industry: steady growth.

'Likker' follows buffalo

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Sam Cabe hunted moonshiners in the mountains for 30 years but he says the illegal whisky-maker has gone the way of the buffalo.

"People just didn't have no money — so they made likker," Cabe said of the old days as he sat in his log cabin in the western North Carolina hills. He's 60 and retired as a U.S. treasury agent, or revenuer in the mountain vernacular.

"Making illicit whisky's going out. Times change, things change.

"Naw, it won't ever be like it was in the '30s, '40s and '50s. That was the heyday. Different class of people back then. Not much left today. Like the buffalo it's gone."

The younger generation is better educated "so they're going into other lines of work, not fooling with whisky," Cabe said.

"Besides that, making likker is real hard work. I know. I've tried it when I was doing undercover work. Those gallon jugs of likker get awful heavy, carrying 'em up that mountain to the road.

"Old Blue," as he was known to local authorities and still workers, came to Wilkes County in 1942 when "people made an awful lot of likker."

Cabe saidf he blew up with dynamite hundreds of stills of almost every type ever devised from the classic copper-pot still to gigantic steamer operations capable of turning out thousands of gallons.

Museum in California

Getty never saw dream

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — One of the world's richest men, J. Paul Getty never saw the project that occupied him almost daily during the last years of is life — the museum that bears his name.

The billionaire oilman had made plans for the past several years to leave his English country home and return to the 65-acre seaside ranch where the museum and a Spanish-style home were waiting.

But Getty, 83, died in his sleep last week, still in England. Memorial services were held with private burial to follow in a special mausoleum built on the estate Getty called home but had not seen for 20 years.

Getty's will, filed last Tuesday in Los Angeles, indicates the personal importance of the museum to the billionaire, for the bulk of his fortune is left to the non-profit institution, open free to the public.

The co-executor of the will, William Bell, estimated that between $650 million and $700 million will be disbursed, with most going to the museum. Although Getty's total estate has been estimated at between $2 billion and $4 billion, much of the money has already been put aside in trusts.

Inheriting that kind of money—hundreds of millions of dollars—could make the modest-size gallery one of the best-endowed museums in the world, and give curators the opportunity to carry on Getty's life-long passion for collecting art.

Getty spent nearly 50 years amassing an excellent private collection of Greek and Roman antiquities, Baroque painting and French furniture, and opened a gallery to the public at Malibu in 1954.

So, Getty supervised the building of a dream palace he never saw but knew intimately through pictures, plans, and purchase of the art masterworks.

The detailed replica of an ancient Roman villa in the town of Herculaneum, the museum sits atop a seaside cliff, sheltered by green waves of eucalyptus and evergreen trees.

Damned by the critics but a delight to the casual visitor, the villa-museum is surrounded by formal gardens which duplicate ancient design and plant material.

The color scheme throughout the ground floor is Roman, with the unusual combination of maroon, gold, green and blue on ceilings and in wall paintings. Upstairs, the flavor changes to baroque, with soft satin-covered walls displaying European art, and ornate replicas of French palace chambers filled with period furniture pieces.

Stephen Garrett, the British architect who worked closely with Getty to build the museum and who now serves as its deputy director, said he considers the huge bequest "a reasonable bombshell," and says the challenge comes in deciding what to do with all the money.

But he added, the challenge of "how fruitfully and beneficially to use the money for public benefit has got to be one of the most enjoyable occupations imaginable."

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is one I have never read about in your column nor have I ever heard it mentioned by anyone else.

I find it impossible to call my husband by his name when I am speaking to him. I don't use any endearing substitutes either, such as "honey" or "dear." I just don't call him anything.

When I was younger I had the same problem with another man for whom I cared deeply. Is it emotional? Can you explain why I'm like this? How can I get over it? Thanks for any help you can give me. — Short Circuit.

Dear S.C.: According to Dr. Harold Visotsky, director of the Institute of Psychiatry at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, there may be one of two reasons for your "problem," depending on how you feel about your husband.

If you have a warm and loving relationship, your inability to call him by his name is an attempt to deny this close relationships with the purpose of protecting it against a possible loss.

If you feel some deep-seated resentment against him, some hidden anger perhaps, your refusal to address him by name is your way of keeping him at arm's length.

So, look inside, honey, and take your pick.

Dear Ann: I must make a big decision and you've got to help me.

My best friend and her husband asked, if I would look after her little boy when she and her husband went on vacation. I said yes — thinking it would be a week or so.

Yesterday Katie came over to discuss their plans. Suddenly she said "Do you think you could water my plants when we're gone? Six weeks is a long time for plants to go without water."

I asked, "SIX WEEKS?" She said, "Yes, it wouldn't pay to take a trip like that for a shorter time."

When I found my tongue I explained that my husband's vacation begins on the 15th and we were taking our four children across country in a camper. "Well," Katie shot back, "you can take Jimmie along. He'd love it!" I almost dropped my teeth.

My husband says he doesn't want their child on our vacation and allowed as how it was a lot of guts for anyone to leave a kid with friends for six weeks. I hate to lose her friendship. What should I do? — Unglued.

Dear Unglued: Glue yourself together and say: "We'll take Jimmie for X number of days, but when we leave for our vacation, you'll have to make other plans. Our camper can just barely accommodate our own family."

If the friendship falls apart you may be lucky. She sounds like a very brassy lady to me.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 15-year-old girl who needs some answers. I learned from your column that alcoholism is a sickness. What about fathers who cheat? Is that a sickness, too?

Ever since my mother told me Daddy has been having an affair with a woman he works with I find it hard to be decent to him. I'd feel better if I though he was "sick." What about it? — B.C. Girl.

Dear B.C.: In a way it is sick, so consider it as such and try to be civil. Too bad your mother told you. She should have unloaded her anger and frustration on a counselor or clergyman and left you out of it.

Can One Wrinkle Lead To A "Prune Face"?

Can neglect—failure to take action against wrinkle-causing dryness lead to shriveled facial lines like the skin on a prune? Yes, your surface skin, like that of a prune, is pulled from beneath by the cells that shrink in size from lack of vital moisture. How can you put back moisture in your skin cells? Simply apply 2nd Début. It contains an anti-wrinkle ingredient CEF that carries water thru the skin surface to dry shrunken cells. As cells expand, they push out—lines and wrinkles fade—often even disappear. Skin softens . . . you should have a younger look . . . in just 10 days or money back. That younger look should last for years with continued use of 2nd Début. Narcotics case

Judge rejects request to return seized funds

A bid for return of $10,000 seized April 14 by police when a West Vancouver woman was arrested in Richmond, B.C., on a major narcotics charge was rejected Monday in Victoria provincial court by Judge William Ostler.

The application was made by Vancouver lawyer Edward Seifred on behalf of Janny Hermina Seinen, 25, one of six persons facing a three-week preliminary hearing in October and November on a joint charge of conspiracy to import and traffic in marijuana.

Seifred said Ms. Seinen was president of Silver Sands Trading Co., a business in Gastown which sold native jewelry made in the U.S. and which had a gross turnover of about $50,000 a year.

The lawyer said Ms. Seifred had sold "several Haida golden bracelets" to a collector in Toronto and had returned to meet her buyer, Robert Brook, and then go to Arizona on a buying trip.

Seifred and prosecutor Cecil Branson agreed the $10,000 was in Brook's open briefcase when police entered their room at the Airport Inn at Richmond. But Branson made a statement indicating the prosecution intended to present the money as evidence at the hearing.

Seifred said the application arose from "somewhat of an unusual situation" because it had to be made within 60 days of seizure or it would be forfeited to the crown.

He said the Narcotics Control Act, under which the charge was laid, allows a judge to return seized items if he is satisfied they will not be needed as evidence and the return can either be "forthwith" or at the end of any hearing or later higher-court trial.

Quoting from Branson's statement, Ostler said he could not order return of the money either now or at the end of proceedings. The $10,000 will remain in the crown's possession until the end of those proceedings, when Ms. Seinen can apply again — but this time to the federal justice minister.

Motels, hotels curbed

Victoria city council has endorsed a recommendation by the Advisory Planning Commission to delete motels and hotels as permitted uses from the city's industrial zoning category.

The APC recently expressed concern that too many hotels and motels might be built on industrially-zoned land.

Apart from the fact that location of a motel next to an industrial plant wouldn't be ideal, city council is also worried that many motels would subsequently be used as regular apartments by Victoria residents who have difficulty finding rental accommodation.

Ten existing motels located in industrial zones are to be rezoned to transient accommodation, but no new ones are to be permitted in industrial zones.

New law: name held

A new section of the Criminal Code was used for the first time in Victoria county court Monday to prevent publication or broadcast of the testimony or identity of the complainant in an indecent assault trial.

Application for non-publication was made by Crown counsel Richard Law midway through the first day of the trial of Kenneth Roy Black, 29, of 2264 Marlene, Colwood, accused of two counts of indecent assault on a 15-year-old girl in Victoria Sept. 3 and 4.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart said he had no choice but to grant the order. The complainant has yet to give her testimony to the court.

Amendments to the Criminal Code, which came into effect April 26, provide for restriction in publication or broadcast for cases involving such matters as indecent assault.

The section under which the judge granted the order states that the presiding judge "shall, if application therefor is made by the prosecutor, make an order directing that the identity of the complainant and her evidence taken in the proceedings shall not be published in any newspaper or broadcast."

(The Victoria daily newspapers have had a long-standing policy of not identiffing the complainant in a rape or indecent assault trial but have published the testimony of the complainant, except certain personal details.)

Law applied at the outset of the trial for an exclusion of the public under Section 442 of the Criminal Code, which says that trials of corporations and persons aged 16 or more shall be in open court except where the judge believes "it is in the interest of public morals, the maintenance of order or the proper administration of justice to exclude all or any members of the public from the court room."

Stewart said he didn't see grounds in this section and did not grant the blanket order "at the moment."

But at mid-morning, Stewart said he had read over the new amendments.

One of them says that where a person is accused of an offence such as indecent assault, and the prosecution or accused applies for an exclusion of the public, "the presiding judge, magistrate or justice, as the case may be, shall, if no such order is made, state, by reference to the circumstances of the case, the reason for not making an order."

Stewart said he couldn't see how that new section could be complied with, because there was no way he could give a reason "by reference to the circumstances of the case" because he didn't know the circumstances.

Law indicated he would make a motion in the afternoon,but when court resumed then he made application only under the amendment dealing with the complainant's identity and testimony.

First witness was Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director of Royal Jubilee Hospital, who said Black was a Technician in the electro-diagnostic services department of the hospital.

He said the complainant and her mother came to see him Sept. 22 and the complainant related experiences said to have occurred Sept. 3 and 4 when she came to the hospital for tests on a machine which reads brain waves.

The next day, he called Black to his office and outlined the allegations made to him.

He said Black's response was "one of profound upset, shock and disbelief. He said repeatedly: 'It just didn't happen'."

Pickles told defence counsel Don Farquhar the complaint made against Black was the only criticism he had heard about him in his seven or eight years as a hospital employee.

"It seemed out of character to me," Pickles said, adding that Black was not suspended and continued to work at the hospital.

The trial continues today.

Tourists steal beds and all

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Motel managers here are being driven to despair by tourists who steal more than $20,000 worth of goods annually. "Anything that's not nailed down, somebody will take it sometime," said manager Ed Cashion. Jim Gooch, another manager said, "I've had them take an entire bed-mattress, box springs and all."

PROVINCIAL COURT

A 23-year-old Colwood area man may have stopped the drinking which played a big part in his earlier crimes, but he did not stop committing crimes, Judge William Ostler said Monday in Victoria provincial court.

This was the key factor seen by the judge as he sentenced Tyler John Sloan, 229 Helmcken, to 15 months in jail followed by a two-year term of probation.

Sloan pleaded guilty to two Victoria charges resulting from three break-ins Friday afternoon, one with theft and two with intent, at homes at 1035 Joan and 1021 and 1052 Craigdarroch.

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang said a .25 calibre gun, a knife, a wallet and $8.75 were stolen from the one home by Sloan and a companion who escaped and has not yet been arrested. Defence lawyer Robert Johnston said the companion took the pistol while Sloan had the knife.

Johnston said Sloan's record of nine offences in eight previous court appearances was because of an alcohol problem which Sloan had beaten by not taking a drink since his last release from detention 2½ months ago.

"If he can show such self-discipline" when it comes to liquor, said Ostler, Sloan had not done the same as far as crime was concerned. He warned Sloan that continued crimes could mean a penitentiary term of two years or more and "I can't believe that's what you want."

In the court section of Judge Harold Alder, a 16-year-old Victoria area youth was sentenced to 12 months' detention followed by a two-year term of probation and Alder recommended the 12 months be spent in an outdoors camp.

Michael Wade Gus, no fixed address, was raised May 18 to adult court from juvenile court and pleaded guilty May 26 to two counts of break-ins with intent April 1 at a Saanich cleaning firm and April 3 at the Gorge Vale golf club in Esquimalt.

Alder was told Gus had a lengthy record and was already on an 18-month probationary term ordered Nov. 26, 1975, in Regina adult court for break-ins and possession of known stolen property.

Herbert Louis Carson, 50, no fixed address, was sentenced to two months in jail in what Ostler called "a classic case of an alcoholic lifting an article not for itself" but to sell it and buy liquor with the proceeds.

Carson pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of stealing a digital clock Friday from The Bay and Legal Aid duty counsel Lenore Boyes said Carson's record was due to an alcohol problem.

Prosecutor Lang said Carson took the clock directly from the store to Centennial Square and was showing it to others when arrested by police summoned by a store security officer.

The preliminary hearing of two persons facing a joint Saanich charge of armed robbery, scheduled to end in two days last week, was remanded by Ostler to July 19 for possible completion.

Tracee Ann Riches, 19, of 1231 Bewdley, and Robert George Walton, 29, of 3975 Cedar Hill Cross Road, were charged in connection with a $160 knifepoint holdup March 24 at Mac's Store, 3245 Cadboro Bay. Ms. Riches is free on bail but Walton has remained in custody.

A second man pleaded guilty June 7 to the same charge and is to be sentenced June 25.

David Bradley Stiles, 26, of 1016 Linden, a Montrealer who arrived recently for a short stay before taking a master's degree at a California arts college, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of shoplifting eight items June 1 from Safeway, 2635 Quadra.

Lang said the items included walnuts, coffee, cheese, chocolates, tuna, dates and a pair of socks. Ostler, who noted Stiles had already spent one night in jail after his arrest June 1, suspended sentence and put Stiles on probation for six months.

Inquest to probe 'fall' under car

District coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre announced late Monday he had decided to conduct a public inquest rather than an inquiry into the death last week of a Saanich woman who might have fallen deliberately in front of a car.

The coroner said the inquest into the death of Honor Eastman, 58, of 3020 Cedar Hill, would start later this week and be held in the Saanich municipal hall courtroom.

He said Victoria and Saanich police reports indicated she might have fallen intentionally in front of two vehicles about 10 minutes apart Thursday evening when she was walking near her home.

Victoria police said she was brushed by one car and Saanich police said she was hit by a second car 10 minutes later and two or three blocks away.

Mrs. Eastman, who was said to have been worried about possible loss of a welfare supplement, suffered multiple skull fractures as well as a broken arm and clavicle. She died in hospital two hours after the incident.

Vienna tries mini-buses

VIENNA (AP) — This Austrian city is giving a one-year tryout to 12 mini-buses in its downtown area. The vehicles, which seat 28 and have a top speed of 37 miles an hour, are expected to lessen traffic congestion and pollution.

Scrambler damage 'superficial' after fire

Damage was scaled downward sharply Monday in a fire which knocked out a ride at the Gllancolme Day fair in Colwood, scared a number of fairgoers and injured one worker slightly.

A spokesman for the Colwood fire department said the damage, originally set at anywhere from $7,000 to $15,000, now had been put at no more than $1,200.

The fire began in the motor of the Big Eli Scrambler ride and the spokesman said a check Sunday showed damage was superficial and not inside the motor. The ride was bought in 1974 for $50,000.

CHANNEL ONE: Another TV veteran has been cancelled. The producers of the Jacques Cousteau series say there will be no more new episodes but have not disclosed why. Reruns of more than a decade of Cousteaus should keep the Calypso on-screen for years . . . the same producers have also cancelled the Jane Goodall animals series.

The Ali-Dunn fight drew 53 per cent of the U.S. audience and helped NBC to its second week-long ratings victory in three weeks, with ABC second and CBS third . . . ABC will show an evening-long "sequel" to its Emmy-winning Eleanor and Franklin (Roosevelt) movie next season . . . the same network will expand last season's James Arness movie The Macahans into a three-part series How the West Was Won. It was a loser, really.

□

Bureau of Useless Information: Saturday's answer — Jackie Cooper and Wallace Beery were Jim Hawkins and Long John Silver in the 1935 movie of Treasure Island. Bobby Driscoll and Robert Newton did the same bits in the 1950 film and Newton also had the TV series. Wow.

Today's question — Some day I'll ask you to name the five older actors who made up The Over-the-Hill Gang in the 1969 movie. For now, which one of the five was the voice of Francis the mule in that movie series? And who was the voice of TV's Mr. Ed? Answers Wednesday.

Tuesday highlights

● 7:30 p.m.—A good viewing evening starts with two hours of Laurel and Hardy winners including Battle of the Century and Two Tars—9.

8:00—CBS brings back I've Got a Secret for the summer—7.

9:30—Oral Roberts' newest special—7.

9:30—Having completed 39 weeks of Monty Python, KCTS starts a 39-week rerun, thanks to Ivor's Acres of Clams—9.

●10:00—The CBC shows exquisite taste with a summer series of The Complete (Victor) Borge. At 10:30, To See Ourselves reruns—2, 6.

10:00—The Olympics: Jesse Owens—8.

10:30—PBS outlines the new child-delivery method—9.

11:30—ABC's suspenser, Night Is the Time for Killing, is a spies-on-the-train thing, with Judy Geeson—4.

CABLE 10—7 p.m., Music Victoria; 7:30, To Be Announced; 8:00, Jim Leith with Bob Wheaton; 8:30, an art-history special from the Emily Carr centre; 9:00, Tuesday at Nine.

Tuesday movies

12:45 noon—Early Bird (1965 Norman Wisdom comedy, for fans only). For years, I wondered why I preferred night work, and then I realized the early bird got the worm and who likes worms?—8.

1:00 p.m.—Only the Valiant (1951 Gregory Peck western). With Gig Young and Barbara Payton; unvaliant and uninteresting—11.

3:30—Red Tomahawk (pale 1967 Gatling Gun western), Broderick Crawford. No, Matilda, it's not about an Indian ho-ho comic—5.

7:00—She Wore a Yellow Ribbon (good 1949 John Wayne western). It's good because John Ford made it—12.

9:00—Cloak and Dagger (dated, pretty silly 1946 Gary Cooper spy stuff). Then it was cloak and dagger, now it's miniskirt and maxibomb—11.

11:30—The Fearless Vampire Killers (1967 Roman Polanski put-on, not to all tastes). I can't look at any movie starring Sharon Tate—12.

12:00—Lady by Choice (always amusing 1934 antique). Carole Lombard and May Robson were two superb comic talents, no matter how weak the script—2.

12:00—Secret War of Harry Frigg (not much 1968 Paul Newman). Very popular with Newman fans, who are very numerous; don't write—6.

12:00—Battle of the River Plate (first-rate 1956 Graf Spee dandy), Peter Finch, Bernard Lee, many more. Best of the late lot—8.

12:30 a.m.—Honeymoon with a Stranger (ho-hum 1969 suspenser), Janet Leigh. One of those where's-my-husband tediums—7.

2:15—Kiss the Girls and Make Them Die (1966 Italian spyslop, a must-miss), Mike Connors, Terry-Thomas Take it like a Mannix—7.

2:20—Get Christie Love (1974 Teresa Graves sugar). Cicely Tyson was to make this pilot but then, thankfully, she signed for the Emmy-winning Jane Pittman drama—6.

2:30—Fast Lady (all right 1963 English comedy), Julie Christie, Stanley Baker. No Matilda, the Fast Lady is a car, not a Late Bird—8.

Tuesday radio

8:00 p.m.—CBC Tuesday Night has John Cage music and an Edith Wharton story—CBU (690).

10:00—The Ottawa revenue-sharing conference ends—CBU.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford bring the desired results do so you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call:

M. V. Chesnut's Garden notes

I got a real blast from an irate reader recently because I had expressed my admiration for Laburnum Vossi, the Golden Chain tree. "Don't you know," she scolded, "that the laburnum is poisonous, and every year local children are rushed to hospital after eating the bean-like seeds?"

She went on to suggest that all existing laburnum trees be chopped down, and all further planting be prohibited by law.

Personally, I can't see this as a wise move at all. In the long run, we can't protect our children by removing all danger from their path—if this was the answer, we'd have to make a start by eliminating the motor car and putting barbed wire fences around the beaches.

The solution must lie in education — in teaching our children how to live with these dangers. The junior safety patrols at school crossings and the water baby swimming classes are good examples of the type of education required.

Our gardens and the woods and fields around us are filled with poisonous leaves, roots and berries, and it would be an impossible task to eliminate them. Many of these are not rare or exotic plants, but homely, everyday things like rhubarb and potatoes.

If children ever took it into their heads to chew on rhubarb leaves, they would become as violently ill as from laburnum seeds, while the stalks are harmless, the leaves contain a toxic drug, oxalic acid.

A London physician, John Gerard, writing in the year 1595, has an interesting account of the poisonous action of rhubarb leaves:

"One John Benet, a Chirurgeon of Maidstone in Kent, being desired to cure a butcher's boa of an ague which did grievously vex him, took out of his garden three or foure leaves of Rhubarbe, which he crushed with a draught of ale and gave it to the lad to drinke: It wrought extreamely downward and upward within one houre after, and never ceased until the boy died in grate agonie."

It seems strange to look upon the common spud as a poisonous plant, yet the potato is closely related to the Deadly Nightshade, and under certain circumstances the plant will follow the family habit of secreting toxic substances. When a potato tuber is exposed to the sun, the skin turns green and a dangeous alkaloid poison called solanin is formed. Cattle have died through eating greened potatoes.

The cultural practice of "hilling-up" or "earthing-up" the potato plants prevents this greening, while peeling greened spuds removes the toxic principle, so the danger is not great from the tubers. But potato blossoms will sometimes set seed, and these fruits look very much like attractive little tomatoes — most tempting to a child, producing violent illness and possibly causing death.

Poison plants grow all around us — the foliage and attractive berries of the yew, the prussic acid secreted in the leaves of the cherry laurel, the daffodil with its narcotic poison, narceine; delphinium, monkshood, the foxgloves with its digitalis, the lily of the valley with its convalarin, the autumn crocus with its colchicine, beloved houseplants such as the poinsettia and dieffenbachia, and many, many others.

My children ran pretty wild when they were young. They loved the fields and woods for their Davey Crockett games, but they didn't go popping strange berries and leaves into their mouths. They had been drilled, again and again, to presume ALL strange plants dangerous until definitely known to be harmless.

Jack Smith

Once again a newspaper columnist from east of the Mississippi has come to visit here in Southern California and then hurried home, like Chicken Little, with the gratifying news of our imminent self-destruction.

This time the messenger of doom is Bob Popp of The Evening Review, which offers "complete news coverage" of East Liverpool, Wellsville, Midland, Chester and Newell. These towns are not in England, as I might have guessed, but in the Ohio Valley where Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia come together.

Whatever the problems of East Liverpool and its neighbors, they are not likely to suffer an exodus of residents to southern California after reading Bob Popp's report. Flood, cyclone, ice and snow would seem like amiable alternatives to the appalling vision of Greater Los Angeles depicted in his column, "Snap, Crackle by Papp."

Popp himself sent me the column, along with a friendly note, that shows he isn't angry, just sorry.

"Nowhere," he says in the column, "has the change been so rapid and so disheartening as it has been in this land of promise, this land of eternal sunshine, bright clear skies and fresh air.

"On most days smog hangs like a dark impenetrable curtain on the horizon, so that it is impossible to see the tops of the snow-capped mountains . . .

". . . Traffic has been slowed to a crawl on the celebrated freeways during the rush hours. Where once Californians drove like demons, at speeds up to 80 miles an hour, the autos are jammed so thickly now that a veteran counts himself lucky if he is able to maintain a steady 30-mile-an-hour pace.

"Areas in which the housing was brand, spanking new 20 years ago have degenerated into modern-day slums, complete with boarded-up windows in repossessed homes, overgrown lawns and shrubbery; abandoned hulks of autos and — the worst scar of all — obscene words painted in the fiery colors of spray cans on the walls of buildings.

"Such rapid degeneration would be unthinkable in the East, which takes 100 years to develop a slum that the Los Angeles area could produce in a fifth of the time . . .

"Perhaps the most chilling touch of all," he goes on, "is a law enforcement straight out of George Orwell's '1984.' A police helicopter circles endlessly at low altitude over residential areas at night, on the hunt for prowlers and also to assist in a search for lawbreakers if they are flushed from cover. It beams to the ground a high-intensity searchlight that roves constantly over the landscape, illuminating everything it touches with a brightness that seems like midday . . .

"All this in a land that was noted not long ago for the fact that its residents left home without locking their doors and the only light that beamed down from the skies was the unobscured brilliance of stars and the moon . . ."

I try not to react defensively to such observations as Popp's. Like the landscapes of Dali and the visions of Kafna, they may be distorted, but they seek out and illuminate our darker truths, as our helicopters seek out and illuminate our cowering felons.

We must not pretend we don't have any sores. San Francisco did that for years, and now the poor old girl is almost all sores. But we ought to treat our visitors better than Popp was treated. From what he describes, I would guess that he stayed with relatives who live on the wrong side of the old Pacific Electric tracks and for entertainment they took him downtown and back on the Harbor Freeway at 5 o'clock of a Tuesday afternoon during an atmospheric inversion.

If he only knew it, he was lucky. He might have seen things that other visitors have found even more appalling than smog, traffic and decay. He might have gone to the Big A and watched Nolay Ryan lose his fifth straight game. Quite demoralizing. He might have gone to a swap meet in the Rose Bowl on a Sunday morning, when everybody back home in the Ohio Valley was in church, and seen American culture at its lowest level. He might have had to spend a night in the Beverly Hills Hotel, which smells, according to a visitor in California Suite, like an overripe cantaloupe.

At least Popp gave us credit for developing slums faster than our big cities do in the East, and of course that's good. A 20-year-old slum is better to live in than a 100-year-old slum, and easier to dispose of without a lot of sentimental foot-dragging by historical societies.

Popp was a lot easier on us than most of our distinguished visitors. Just the other day the once-angry young British playwright John Osborne went home to London, after a sojourn in the Beverly Hills Hotel, and said Los Angeles was so terrible he almost wished the Russians would atom bomb it.

Once you've been here, though, you never quite get over it. I wouldn't be surprised if Osborne's next play smelled something like an overripe cantaloupe.

When I was visiting Kansas last month, that state's senate gave a disappointing demonstration of the way in which prison reform gets emasculated because there really is no pressure group to represent the prisoners.

What the hard-liners on punishment consistently fail to recognize is the fact that whatever gives convicts more opportunity and more hope while serving their terms also aids society — letting out bitter, cynical and desperate men makes it a certainty that most of them will return to prison.

The Kansas secretary of corrections had recommended that 27 local governments either improve their jails or close them. When the measure got to the senate, it was so eviscerated that nothing remained but a few hazy, and probably unenforceable, guidelines nobody will pay much attention to.

For instance, it was recommended that prison employees be given some training in penology. Right now, zookeepers are taught more about handling animals than jail employees about handling men. Rejected.

It was recommended that inmates who are addicted, deviated, ill or dangerous be segregated from other prisoners. Rejected.

Also, that no punitive action be taken against a prisoner without a hearing. This is both fair play and common law. Again, rejected.

As a corollary, it was recommended there be an administrative review and hearings before such discipline could be imposed. (How else protect against sadism, bigotry, personal vengeance, and malice?) Rejected.

Finally, it was urged that a material witness be housed separately from those charged or convicted of a crime. (How else protect the witness from bullying, browbeating, and retaliation?) Once more, rejected.

As the Wichita Eagle remarked editorially, "Most of the rules and standards for the state's jails would have required nothing more than humane treatment for inmates — some not even convicted of criminal behavior but awaiting fair trial."

I am not picking on the Kansas prison system because this retrograde attitude is typical of most states, some of them much worse. It simply happens to be the latest, and most obvious, example of the "crime scare" attitude that has not merely frozen prison reforms, but actually turned back the corrections calendar to the bad old days.

All this has nothing to do with the swiftness, length of severity of sentences, mind you. It has to do with fair and humane treatment, so that the inmate is not far more brutalized when he leaves jail than when he entered. If we impounded a dog for six months and made him more vicious, the folly would be obvious. We cannot see that, while character and society may create the criminal, our prisons reinforce his anti-social bias.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — One of life's little dramas took place at the Polo Lounge the other day.

Eddie Fisher was seated in a front booth with Paul Ross and in comes Richard Burton with Suzy Hunt. At one point Richard was standing with his back not five feet away from Eddie but if Richard saw his predecessor with Elizabeth Taylor, he didn't let on.

Ross, who was Richard's first press agent when he first came to Hollywood to do My Cousin Rachel and The Robe, crawled over Eddie to greet Richard.

The two old friends chatted amiably for a few minutes and then Burton and Suzy left.

As Ross resumed his seat next to Eddie, Fisher commented: "The last time I saw Burton, he was with Elizabeth and all three of us for five hours were discussing our future. That was in Rome."

And we all know what happened after that, don't we?

Eddie, by the way, is separated again from Terry Richard, his beauty queen wife. She lives in the house in Palmdale while Eddie is staying in town with Buddy Hackett.

But Eddie dates Terry. And if you saw Terry, you would know why.

When Bing Crosby does the big concert at San Francisco's Masonic auditorium, all the proceeds will go to finish that statue of Louis Armstrong in New Orleans.

The statue is due to be dedicated on July 4, the 76th anniversary of Satchmo's birth in the cradle of jazz.

"Louis and his music were America's good-will ambassadors to the world," said Bing.

Bing heard that sculptress Elizabeth Catlett needed some funds to get the statue done in time so he promptly earmarked the net from his concert to finish the job.

Talk Politics with Jim Hume

Sometimes it takes a while for things to suface, but they usually do.

Like the $80,000 contract Robert Williams signed with the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society a month after he resigned his seat in Vancouver East to clear the way for David Barrett to re-enter the Legislature.

The Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society has been around for 22 years. It owns quite a chunk of valuable property in downtown Nanaimo. On the property is the old CCF, now NDP, meeting hall, stores and apartments. It more than pays its own way.

And to be a shareholder you have to be a member of the NDP.

Last Friday at the annual NDP convention in Penticton several delegates asked what Williams was doing since he resigned and what his duties were with the party. They were shuffled off to the sidelines or merely told that Williams was doing research for the NDP caucus at a salary equal to the salary of MLAs, a little less than $24,000 a year.

By late Saturday afternoon a few of the more belligerent delegates were getting seriously disenchanted with their inability to find out just what Williams was doing. And they were kicking around a rumor that he was $80,000 richer than he was late last February when he resigned his seat.

The rebels, claiming to be 115 strong, spent a good part of Saturday trying to draft a resolution protesting Williams' appointment as a "research" worker at $24,000 a year. They had hoped to get that motion on the floor Sunday morning but, for as yet unexplained reasons, failed to do so.

David Stupich, the NDP MLA for Nanaimo and the treasurer of the Commonwealth Holding Society, is the man who made the $80,000 deal with Williams. He also sits on the NDP executive, the group meeting last Thursday in Oliver to complete the $24,000 deal. He denies strongly any suggestion that either deal was made to "pay" Williams for resigning his seat to make way for Barrett.

But he admits that people could understandably take that connotation from the way events unfolded.

Stupich tells a relatively simple and logical story.

For the past several years the Commonwealth Holding Society has been trying to decide whether to sell its Nanaimo property or develop it in accordance with city plans. Not too long ago, Commonwealth was verbally offered $500,000 for the package.

As a result of those talks and offers, Stupich talked to Williams, a former planner of some reputation. "I couldn't think of a better man to do the job for us," Stupich said Monday. "He is a planner and he does know the party. We needed a decision and I still think he is the ideal man to give us that decision."

Stupich is positive that the Commonwealth-Williams deal was not discussed until after Williams had resigned. Williams resigned Feb. 27; his contract with Commonwealth started April 1.

The negotiations for the $80,000, at $2,000 a month for 40 months, were negotiated one-on-one between Stupich and Williams, but Stupich required endorsement of his recommendations by the Commonwealth executive. He says he received unanimous support.

With Williams hired by the NDP property-holding company in Nanaimo, the provincial NDP executive enters the picture. When they met in Oliver last week to discuss the hiring of Williams as a researcher for the party, many members of the executive heard for the first time from Stupich of the $80,000 contract.

They went ahead and retained Williams anyway at an MLA's salary, but with one proviso. When he works for the party (researching resource development in various regions of the province) he will be on loan from Commonwealth Holding, and the party will pay his salary. In other words, Commonwealth will bill the party for the hours, days, weeks or months worked.

Williams' contract with Commonwealth is for 40 months. His contract with the party is for at least 12 months. Stupich admits it could be at least a year before Williams gets around to doing any intensive work for the Commonwealth Holding Society.

He makes it clear that the $80,000 earmarked for Williams is not in the former cabinet minister's personal bank account. "It is in a trust fund as a demonstration of our good faith," Stupich says. "We felt it important that he knew we were solvent and really wanted to push ahead."

Stupich says he can't remember the exact date when the $80,000 contract was first discussed with Williams. "But it was some time after he resigned and there were definitely no discussions before he resigned. And there is no foundation at all to any suggestion that he resigned his seat as a result of the contract. No foundation at all."

The deal between Williams and Commonwealth "is a deal between Nanaimo and Bob Williams, not the party and Bob Williams," Stupich insists. "The provincial caucus and the party secretary (Cliff Scotton) were informed by letter after we had reached agreement."

Graham Lea (NDP—Prince Rupert) says he was "never present when the $80,000 contract was discussed at caucus." But he added that it could have been talked about when he was absent.

Stupich says the contract—in the form of a letter signed by himself and Williams—can be cancelled by either one at any time.

And he insists that if NDP delegates or other people view the deal as a "payoff" to Williams to resign his seat those views "are just not true."

Vitamin binge

CHICAGO (AP) — Too many vitamin A pills can turn a person yellow, says James Boyer, a University of Chicago liver specialist. He said symptoms of vitamin A toxicity included cirrhosis-like damage to the liver, fatigue, fluid accumulation and the yellowish color caused by jaundice.

Sooke subdivision 'unlikely'

A bid by Grouse Nest Resorts Ltd. to increase the size of a proposed subdivision adjacent to East Sooke Park from 125 to 300 lots will probably be turned down by the Capital Region Board.

Chances of getting the board's approval for the expansion are "virtually 99.9 per cent against," a regional board spokesman said Monday.

The proposed expansion, he said, didn't conform to the regional development plan and was contrary to the 10-acre development freeze in East Sooke.

The zoning change would also be contrary to provisions of a new zoning bylaw for the area. The bylaw has been approved in principle by the regional board.

Haasam Kamil, president of Grouse Nest Resorts, said earlier Monday he would apply for the zoning change this week.

Preliminary work on the subdivision began in 1972 but has been hampered ever since by legal and technical problems.

To date, $1.1 million has been spent developing 125 half-acre lots on a 90-acre parcel of land overlooking Sooke Basin.

Kamil estimates it would cost another $1 million to complete that phase of the project; that would bring basic costs for each lot to about $16,000.

If, on the other hand, he were allowed to put in 300 lots, the cost per lot could be held at about $10,000.

Kamil's problems began in 1973 when he was unable to secure advances on mortgate funds because Block Bros., which had entered an agreement to sell the lots, questioned the project's feasibility.

Kamil sued Block Bros. for breach of contract and eventually was awarded $586,000 in damages. Block Bros. is now appealing that decision to the Supreme Court of Canada and is counter-suing Kamil for $900,000 in alleged damages.

As LRB official called in

Kitimat strike scope widens

KITIMAT (CP) — There was no sign of a break Monday in a work stoppage by union members at the huge Alcan aluminum plant in this central B.C. coastal community at the tip of Douglas Channel.

The company said Monday its non-union office staff had returned to work after being blocked by a picket line set up June 2 by the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers.

Several separate grievances escalated into nearly a total walkout. The illegal strike ended Saturday when a squad of almost 200 riot-equipped RCMP arrested and removed the 32 pickets on duty early in the morning.

Soon afterward, eight members of the Federation Syndicale Sector Aluminum of Quebec, who are on a legal strike at three Alcan sites in that province, put up a round-the-clock picket.

The CASAW local in Kitimat asked its members not to cross that line.

Meanwhile, Alcan has asked the labor relations board to issue a cease-and-desist order specifically to apply against the Quebec pickets, company spokesman Brian Hemmingway said Monday.

Union members, gathered Monday morning near the FSSA pickets close to the Alcan property, were counting workers as they passed in and out of the plant.

One union member said fewer than 10 hourly paid workers had crossed the picket line Monday.

"It looks good for us," he said. "One bunch of guys came out and immediately joined us."

The company said Sunday it had more than 900 workers, 300 of them hourly paid, in the plant. Most had been there since the walkout began.

The company was standing pat on its refusal to reopen its contract with the 1,800 hourly-paid workers.

The union says about 90 to 95 per cent of these workers belong to their union.

Some of the rest are former members of the United Steelworkers of America, which lost the Alcan certification to CASAW four years ago.

Peter Burton, CASAW president, met Monday with Jim McElroy, a special investigator with the British Columbia labor relations board, sent to Kitimat to study the impasse. The union said it would welcome third-party intervention.

Union members say they approved the contract in January only after the company threatened a lockout if they did not sign a contract for which the federal anti-inflation board set the limits of 8 per cent for this year's wage increase and 6 for next. The Quebec workers are on strike after refusing an Alcan offer of the same increases.

Burton said CASAW wants something closer to the settlement by pulp workers at the Eurocan mill. That settlement was for 15.1 per cent in the first year and 10 in the second.

The company is expected to take legal action over the work stoppage. It says it might seek a labor board ruling to declare the Quebec pickets are not legal under the provincial labor code's allied pickets' section; and lay contempt of court charges against the 51 union members named in a labor board order to return to work.

The board filed three orders to end the illegal strike, and the union voted each time to defy the order.

R. J. Clifford, company personnel manager, said Sunday the company might also seek damages from the union for expenses incurred during the stoppage.

The 32 pickets arrested Saturday were charged with obstruction of a private roadway.

The company has used foremen and management personnel to keep the plant going. It said about 300 hourly paid employees also are working.

A union official said huge costs would be incurred to restart the plant after an orderly shutdown. He said the cost was estimated at $10,000 for each of the 731 pots on the production line. He set the estimated cost of restarting the closed Arvida Quebec plant at $25 million.

Union accuses Ottawa of killing rail service

VANCOUVER (UPI) — More than 3,500 railway workers in B.C. Monday accused the federal government of adopting a "phony philosophy" on railroad costs and "hammering the final nail in the coffin" of the passenger train in Canada.

They rejected proposals to scrap duplication of existing transcontinental Canadian National and CP Rail servies and called instead for both systems to be upgraded and expanded.

"Up to now the railways have found the answer (to fewer passengers) in reducing service and giving poorer service rather than trying to find out what the real problem is," said the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

"The choice the government is trying to give us now is of further deterioration of rail passenger transportation . . .

But rail transportation offers such economic and environmental advantages regarding land use, air pollution, noise level, energy, efficiency and conservation that expansion and modernization of services is in the nation's interest."

The union's position was contained in a brief submitted to a special committee of the Canadian Transport Commission studying proposals to overhaul the transcontinental passenger train service.

The union forecast a greater differential between rail and air fares because of rising fuel bills and said the cost of operating the family car also will rise.

"Under these circumstances the travelling public will be ready to return to train travel providing it is made modern, attractive and reliable, complete with the basic features of sleeping and eating facilities," the union said.

The union's regional vice-president, Arthur A. Henham, criticized the government stance on railroad subsidies and called the large sums allocated for the development of air travel a disgrace.

Labor relations board calls newspaper talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Both sides in the Pacific Press Ltd. dispute will appear Wednesday before a formal hearing of the B.C. Labor Relations Board, board vice-chairman Ed Peck said Monday.

The hearing, called to make a ruling on company complaints about the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions, may last two days.

The company has asked the board to rule on whether work stoppages related to study sessions constitute an illegal strike. The board also has been asked to rule on whether the joint council has been bargaining in good faith.

There was only one edition of the Province Monday instead of the normal two. A study session in the press room and an unscheduled lunch break by mailers resulted in cancellation of Monday's delivery of the Province to southern Vancouver Island, the Interior, and parts of the Fraser Valley.

The Sun's first edition Monday was about an hour late.

Guy walkout called off

PENTICTON (Staff Reporter) — The B.C. Federation of Labor decided not to walk out of the New Democratic Party annual convention Sunday.

Indications Saturday afternoon were that federation secretary Len Guy would pull the labor delegates from the convention floor following his defeat in a race for the second vice-presidency of the NDP.

After several off-floor caucuses, Guy was rumored to have got the word from the International Woodworkers of America and the United Steelworkers unions that they would not join a walkout.

While nobody was commenting officially, the refusal of the two unions to go along would have significantly diluted Guy's protest move.

Adding strength to the IWA move was the election of Jack Munro, IWA president, as a member-at-large on the executive. That move came early Sunday morning and appeared to spike Guy's moves.

He'll brave sharks for bicentenary

NAMES in the NEWS

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Walter Poenisch, a 62-year-old Ohio baker recognized as the world's strongest endurance swimmer, plans to celebrate the U.S. bicentennial today by swimming 100 miles in the shark-infested waters of the Florida Straits in a red, white and blue painted cage towed by a boat.

Poenisch, who said he saw the movie Jaws three times, will be carrying a stick with a nail imbedded in it, an anti-shark weapon devised by undersea explorer Jacques Cousteau.

He said Cousteau told him to touch the sharks lightly, "but don't get them excited."

Legion seeks facilities for aging veterans

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Royal Canadian Legion wants immediate action to provide special-care facilities for aging veterans but the most the federal government has offered is an assurance the problem is being studied.

As the service veterans' association opened its golden anniversary convention Monday, several among the 2,500 delegates rose to urge Legion action in improving and building more facilities.

One of the first resolutions urged the Legion's Dominion Command to work with federal and provincial governments to initiate a construction program for special facilities.

The resolution, urging immediate action to assist aging and physically handicapped veterans, said domiciliary and chronic care homes should be built at strategic locations across the country.

Daniel MacDonald, minister of veterans affairs, said the nature of treatment required by veterans has changed dramatically since department hospitals were established primarily for the care of veterans who required treatment as a result of war service.

'You take more, we'll take less'

Premiers shy over Trudeau tax offer

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau offered the provinces a financial arrangement Monday that he called "a new form of federalism," but the provincial premiers greeted it warily.

The proposal, the latest in 40 years of haggling over taxing and spending powers, is to make more room for the provinces to levy taxes while winding down direct Ottawa payments to shared-cost programs for health care and post-secondary education.

The leaders argued for three hours about equalization — a system expiring by law next March whereby Ottawa grants money to seven poorer provinces to increase their income to an agreed per-capita average. No agreement was reached on a replacement program, but they decided to take up the subject at a scheduled two-hour windup session of the full conference at 9:30 a.m. EDT today.

At the evening meeting, over a roast-lamb dinner, and afterwards, the premiers reported little progress among themselves on long-standing proposals for constitutional reform, but said it will be discussed again late this summer.

The provinces split along rich-poor lines, with Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia generally supporting the idea of more taxing power in place of federal-provincial dollar-matching for public services, while the other provinces worried about losing money on the deal.

The provinces were unani- federal plan to end a five-year-old system of money transfers from Ottawa, known as revenue guarantees, to make up for any shortfall resulting from the 1971 overhaul of income-tax laws.

"A deal is a deal," said Ontario Premier William Davis in opposing retroactive withdrawal of the revenue-guarantee arrangement.

After 6½ hours in closed, full-dress conference, the premiers met in a working dinner session without aides at 24 Sussex Drive, the prime minister's residence, to talk casually about the continuing question of constitutional reform and the federal anti-inflation program.

Premier Frank Moores of Newfoundland headed home early, but John Crosby, his energy minister, sat in at the dinner.

Before the dinner, participants said they expected to wind up all matters of business during the dinner session. The conference was originally expected to last two days.

Finance ministers are to take up the issues of taxing powers, shared-cost programs and revenue guarantees in detail next month.

Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia said before the dinner that Ottawa "stonewalled the discussion" on reform of federal-provincial financial arrangements, which have been a perennial, active feature of Confederation since the 1930s.

But Trudeau said the aim is "a new form of federalism so the provinces can tax to meet their own needs."

This freedom to tax and spend according to their own priorities, instead of being constrained by the demands of federal-provincial programs in which costs are shared dollar for dollar, has been requested by some of the provinces, he said.

"We're saying: 'You do the taxing—you'll get the thanks for the money you spend and you'll get the blame for the taxes you raise'," said Trudeau.

After opening statements at the economic conference, several premiers told reporters

Premier laments changing scene

Happy times gone

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island, senior of the 11 government leaders in the country, says federal-provincial first ministers' conferences are not what they used to be.

B.C.'s Premier Bennett, junior member of the group with only six months at the job, says he is glad things are not as they used to be when his colorful father, W. A. C. Bennett, had a seat at the table.

"They're more like board of directors meetings now," says Campbell, 42, the man who has represented the island province for 10 years. "Before, they were a rather occasional and happy gathering."

"A board of directors' approach is necessary because we're running the country," says Bennett, 44, premier since Dec. 11.

"There has to be mutual trust on both sides. After all, we're working for the same taxpayers."

Campbell says conferences of a decade ago, involving such former premiers as Joey Smallwood of Newfoundland, Bennett and Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, used to have more of "a sense of occasion."

"One looked forward to getting away and getting together," he says. "They were rare events then."

King and Macdonald escort Barrett, watched by Stephen Rogers

NDP chief takes seat

Cheers and humor welcome Barrett

David Barrett (NDP—Vancouver East) was escorted to his seat in the Legislature Monday by Alex Macdonald, also Vancouver East, and William King (NDP-Revelstoke.)

The public galleries erupted in applause as Barrett was taken to stand before the ceremonial mace to be officially welcomed to the house by Speaker Ed Smith.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy welcomed Barrett on behalf of Premier Bennett, in Ottawa for a first ministers' conference. King replied that he was gratified to find such a warm welcome from the government ranks which will "be in no way dissipated as the weeks roll by."

Liberal Gordon Gibson added his welcome with a touch of humor regarding former premier Barrett's "narrow" victory in the Vancouver-East byelection, a byelection won with more than 70 per cent of the popular vote.

And Conservative Scott Wallace congratulated Barrett on his "tremendous victory — it is vital that this house have a strong opposition."

Barrett thanked the house for the kind welcome and made one request: "When I give my maiden speech I ask that there be no heckling."

As the house chuckled Smith added a rare touch of humor with: "So ordered."

Last week in Penticton, Barrett said he intended to listen to his colleagues for a few days before taking part in debates.

Barrett was personally defeated in his former Coquitlam riding in the Dec. 11 provincial election.

CHICAGO (AP) — A motorist stranded on a dark, rain-soaked South Side street refused to pay $10 demanded by four youths, who then shot him and killed his wife. Police said the attack was one of a series of assaults on motorists stranded by torrential rains.

Three of the couple's six children watched the attack, which police said occurred in darkness Sunday night after heavy rains detoured motorists from the Dan Ryan expressway to unfamiliar streets on the South Side.

"That's the way it is down there," said Joseph DiLeonardi, city homicide commander. He said the youths were trying to "find a chance to stick somebody up."

There were reports of as many as 15 scattered attacks, but DiLeonardi said reports were filed only in four of the incidents involving 17 persons. Three persons were in hospital, one in serious condition.

There were no arrests and police said they could not estimate the number of youths involved in the series of attacks.

The slain woman was identified as Mrs. Phyllis Ann Anderson, 51, of Buffalo Grove—a northwest suburb. Her husband, Leo—editor of Telephony, a magazine for the communications industry—required surgery for his gunshot wounds and was listed in serious condition under intensive care. The three children in the car required treatment for cuts from broken glass.

Edward Rosen, 35, of Schererville, Ind., and his wife Judith had stopped in traffic when youths approached and demanded money.

When he refused, the youths struck him in the side of the face with an undetermined object and dragged him from his car. He was in fair condition with cuts and a broken jaw.

'Go to hell' Teamster reply to reformers

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Teamster president Frank Fitzsimmons told 2,300 delegates to the union convention Monday that those who want to reform the union should "go to hell."

Fitzsimmors' opening remarks to the 21st Teamster convention were directed almost entirely at dissidents and reporters who recently have printed allegations of corruption in the 2-million member union. He accused them of trying to "destroy" the Teamsters union.

"For those who say it is time we reform this union, who say it is time for the officers to stop selling out the members, I say to them — go to hell," Fitzsimmons declared.

"I will never allow any of those infiltrators into this organization until you, the delegates to this international union, by majority vote, vote to allow those who would destroy this organization to come into a place of prominence."

The Teamsters union has been under increased scrutiny in recent months by reformers, congressional investigators and federal agents exploring charges of financial corruption and the still unsolved disappearance of the teamsters ex-boss Jimmy Hoffa.

Labor Secretary W. J. Usery, who followed Fitzsimmons to the podium, was criticized by union reformers for appearing to put his "stamp of approval" on the union convention while the union is under investigation by the labor department for alleged pension fund abuses.

Rhodesia promoting blacks to officers

SALISBURY (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith announced plans Monday to advance blacks to officer rank in the armed forces of racially troubled Rhodesia.

Smith, speaking on the eve of a government report on race discrimination in his white-minority-ruled country, also said greater promotion prospects will be opened for blacks in the police force.

"This will cater for selected long-serving members in the ranks who have demonstrated marked qualities of leadership, professional ability and loyalty," Smith said in a radio and television broadcast.

United Press International

His delegate count growing by the hour, Jimmy Carter said Monday that the Democratic Party would enter the 1976 presidential campaign with "a harmonious party" for the first time in a decade.

Carter expressed confidence that the nomination was his, but assured a fundraising dinner in Dallas that the party "came out of the many primaries unscathed.

"I don't believe there are any open wounds left," he said. "We will arrive at the national convention with a harmonious party."

Carter stopped in Dallas enroute home to Georgia from New York city where he received an enthusiastic reception from the 274-member New York delegation.

Caucuses and state delegation meetings assured Carter of large alogs of delegates from New York, Connecticut and Missouri. Senator Frank Church released his 74 delegates and endorsed Carter, and Morris Udall said his delegates were free to back the Democratic frontrunner.

The latest UPI nationwide survey gave Carter 1,347 assured votes. Just 158 short of the number needed for the democratic nomination.

In the tight republican contest, President Ford's aides said he would win enough delegates in upcoming conventions in Iowa, Minnesota, Connecticut and Delaware for a "commanding lead" over Ronald Reagan going into the gap convention.

But the Ford campaign conceded Reagan would win most of the 31 delegates in Colorado and the 38 in Washington, and said North Dakota's 18 were "up for Grabs."

Ford spokesman Peter Kaye said "we are reasonably confident" of Ford defeating Reagan for the nomination.

Ford has 984 delegates to 884 for Reagan, with 1,130 needed to nominate. There are 258 delegates yet to be picked, and with the struggle for the nomination going down to the wire, both Ford and Reagan actively wooed the 133 uncommitted GOP delegates.

With Carter assured of the nomination, there was wide speculation on his vice-presidential choice. Church said he had "no expectations one way or the other" on getting the nod, while Udall ruled himself out as a possibility.

"I think we have now approached the point where the outcome of our convention is fairly certain," Carter told the New York delegates. "In the presence of a very likely first ballot nomination. We must move to ensure party unity."

Carter faces queries

'I will never lie'

Jimmy: Charming, courteous —and difficult to understand

WASHINGTON (AP) Clearly, Jimmy Carter is the most infuriating candidate for president in years.

He came out of nowhere and now, 17 months later, stands at the brink of the Democratic nomination.

He is not easily understood and is impossible to pigeonhole. He is a white farmer from Georgia, who wins black votes north and south, a man whose father couldn't abide racial integration, whose mother could and did, loudly and publicly. He is a product of a tiny, claustrophobic town, with a single one-block business street.

He is a politician with the temerity, or the naivete, to say "I will never lie" to a country at the nadir of its trust. He is a highly intelligent man sophisticated in the ways of politics and image-making who says, nonetheless, when asked, that he was "born again in Christ." He is a Southerner, who may at last bury the Civil War, an intellectual, a liberal in many things, which makes him, according to one nasty view of Dixie, a minority within a minority within a minority.

He is the son of a compelling woman who joined the U.S. Peace Corps at the age of 67. He is a deeply religious Baptist, who still teaches Sunday school with Secret Service men in attendance, a Baptist whose beer-drinking brother goes to church only under forced draft, whose sister is an evangelist and faithhealer with a master's degree in psychology, whose second sister paints, rides a motorcycle and moves about with a free spirit in Plains, Ga., population 648.

James Earl Carter, Jr., insists on being called Jimmy, which is a misleading invitation to intimacy. He is not, off the platform, a man who invites that. He is charming, courteous, attentive and responsive but there is a circle within that remains curtained.

People who find mystery in Jimmy Carter mystify him. He does not shrink from questions and, to a recent interviewer who apologized for trying to probe the inner man, he said, "Help yourself."

"I am very careful about what I say," he said. "And I try to tell exactly what I think and I haven't tried to withhold anything."

"You don't regard yourself as particularly complicated?"

"No, I really don't. But I do have people come up to me and say I don't understand how you can like classic music and Dylan Thomas and Reinhold Neibuhr and also Bob Dylan, the Alman

Couple saved from brink

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — A Minneapolis couple was rescued from a drifting cabin cruiser Monday about a quarter of a mile from the brink of Niagara Falls.

Police said David Matteson, 35, and his wife, Mary Ellen, had drifted "about as close to the falls as you can get and come out alive and talk about it."

Provincial universities

Ottawa after influence

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government emphasized Monday it wanted a bigger say in how the provinces ran their universities and other post-secondary educational institutions.

At the closed federal-provincial economic conference, Ottawa pressed for establishment of a permanent forum of federal and provincial cabinet ministers to meet regularly and discuss what Prime Minister Trudeau described as "common objectives" for higher education.

Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner, federal minister responsible for annual post-secondary education payments of $1.5 billion to the provinces, said outside the meeting that the idea was greeted cautiously by the premiers, who wanted to retain provincial constitutional control over education.

Faulkner said federal authorities were careful at the meeting to present the proposal not as a federal intrusion into provincial territory, "but as a forum for discussion of problems that concern us all."

There was no threat of financial retribution if the provinces refused to accept the idea, he said, "but we said we would expect there would be some response to our concerns."

Specifically, Ottawa wants the proposed forum to explore three current problem areas: Better guarantees of access to higher education, including the rights of students in one province to attend university in another; improved programs to promote bilingualism in education, and more comprehensive courses in Canadian studies.

Ottawa now pays 50 per cent of post-secondary education costs in a program that is costing about 15 per cent more each year. Total spending is expected to reach $1.5 billion this year, up from $1.3 billion last year and $1.1 billion in 1974.

Faulkner said some premiers tried to deflect the proposal by saying post-secondary education was regularly discussed by the existing council of provincial ministers of education.

Ottawa rejected an attempt to allow federal participation on the council with observer status and chose instead a full voice in a new federal-provincial forum, he said.

Faulkner, who argued the federal case before the premiers, said he would visit all provincial education ministers during the next month to further explain the proposal and seek firm commitments on establishment of the forum.

Town rallies from deluge

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) Cleanup operations in this southeastern Saskatchewan community continued Monday after one of the heaviest rainstorms in the city's history, but the situation was under control, an emergency measures organization spokesman said.

More than 130 millimetres (5.15 inches) of rain fell in the area during the weekend, taxing the city's sewage lift station to the limit. The rains stopped Sunday and the system was operating normally Monday, a spokesman said.

The water flooded basements and made street travel close to impossible.

Grieving mother feels sorry for son's killer

EDMONDON (CP) — Grieving for her dead child, an Edmonton mother finds time to express compassion for the seven-year-old boy charged in connection with her son's death.

Mrs. Liz Templar, 25, said she "felt sick" when police told her a neighborhood boy had been charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment in connection with the death of two and one-half-year-old Christopher Templar.

"I thought it was a shame," Mrs. Templar said. "I would rather it had been an accident."

Her son's body was found by police scuba divers Friday night in a pond at the bottom of a ravine near his home after a search which began when the child disappeared during a family barbecue Thursday night.

Mrs. Templar said she had asked police to tell the other boy's mother "We had no hard feelings. It must be awfully hard on his mother. It's hard enough for us — Chrissie was our pride and joy."

Mrs. Templar suffers from multiple sclerosis and doctors have told her she may not be able to have more children. But she said her two-month old daughter Christy and her strong religious beliefs are helping her accept the loss of her son.

"I'm glad in a way that it happened to us, and not to someone who had nothing to fall back on."

Tornado's trail of ruin

Chicago suburb of Lemont looks like bombed-out section of Berlin in wake of tornado, one of scores that tore through the U.S. midwest Monday. Four persons were killed and another 45 injured in the storms, among most widespread and devastating in U.S. history. In Lemont, three-square-mile area was laid waste, with trees stripped of foliage and lumber strewn around like matchsticks. Village of Jordan, Iowa, was virtually wiped off map.

Smoking. What are you going to do about it?

If you've given up smoking more times than you'd like to remember, the chances are you enjoy it so much you don't want to give it up at all.

The question is, what are you going to do about it?

You've probably tried cigarettes that promise extra mildness and found yourself checking every once in a while to see if they were still lit Which brought you right back to your regular brand.

Now, there is Vantage.

Vantage gives you the taste you want. The full, rich flavour of Virginia tobaccos. But here's the big difference. Only Vantage has the specially designed filter that gives you so much of what you want in a cigarette with a lot less of what you don't want.

Vantage is not a heavy drag cigarette. You don't have to work hard getting the smoke through so that all the joy of smoking is lost.

Rich taste and easy draw. Good reasons for any thoughtful smoker to consider the new cigarette called Vantage.

We suggest you try a pack.

Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked—avoid inhaling. 11 mg. "tar" 0.8 mg. nicotine.

Property proposal

Owner of this property on Allenby Road in Duncan, which was site of last fall's mudslide resulting in destruction of office building, has applied to Cowichan Valley Region Board for approval to construct another building. Art Harrison said he would have a reinforced concrete retaining wall at foot of slide area to deter further slides. However, region has asked Harrison for engineering reports before any action is taken.

Activity centre in limbo

Students at Malaspina College in Nanaimo still do not know when and how funding can be obtained to allow them to convert the cafeteria in the vocational building into a student activity centre.

John De Boek, immediate past president of the student society, has told college council at its monthly meeting that a request for funds for the project had been rejected by the education department.

"It looks as if we might have to go on strike for the money," he commented. "I am extremely disappointed at their outright rejection of our request for assistance but I suppose, in the present circumstances, it was not all that surprising."

De Boek, who was accompanied by incoming society president Lance Blanco, asked council to make further approaches to the government. It is hoped that it might be prepared to consider a request for a reduced-interest or interest-free loan for the conversion project, estimated to cost around $100,000.

Rules set for faculty

NANAIMO — Malaspina College faculty or staff who refuse to cross a picket line on any future occasions will not be paid even if they offer to do their work at an alternative location.

College council, at its regular monthly meeting, has adopted a motion, proposed by Don Hammond: "That, in the event of any future labor disputes, employees who do not perform their work in their designated place will not be paid."

In early April the college was picketed by members of the CUPE locals involved in the dispute with the Mid-Island Public Employers' Association and a number of faculty members did not cross the picket lines. Instead they made arrangements to organize their students programs from temporary headquarters in the basement of a nearby church.

Hammond pointed out that this was not a satisfactory alternative, especially for students involved in laboratory work. He added that he did not dispute the right of the individual to refuse to cross a picket line but merely wanted to set a policy that, in such cases, the individual would not be paid.

Mrs. Avis Mitchell, council chairman, invited comments on the motion and heard John De Boek, recently-retired president of the Malaspina College Student Society, say he felt it could place students in a very difficult positon.

"What will the situation be, with students who are union members and who have to cross the picket line to attend their classes?" asked De Boek. "This might make it impossible for them to obtain union work during the summer months. If instructors are prepared to make alternative arrangements for students to continue their studies, I don't think they should be penalized."

Newly-elected president of the faculty association Bob Lane said that he tended to agree with De Boek's feelings and added: "I also agree that we should make every effort to keep the educational process going but not by this method. We should all be looking at ways of avoiding labor disputes, not anticipating future strikes."

Why older whisky isn't necessarily better whisky.

At 2 years old Canadian whisky is pale, harsh, unmatured—and around 12 it's darker and beginning to take on a heavy 'woody' taste. In between this time, it becomes golden, mellow, smooth and full-bodied. In our opinion OFC is the prime Canadian whisky. That's why OFC is 8 years old and only 8 years old. The prime time for taste, try it.

Datsun's lowest-priced Space Vehicle!

F-10 Station Wagon only $3,995*

The new front-wheel drive Datsun F-10.

In their rush to make cars smaller and cheaper, a lot of companies will try to sell you a stripped-down model that looks like a wagon on the outside but sure doesn't work like one. Not Datsun. The F-10's rear door opens wide to reveal more than 50 cubic feet of luggage space. And because the F-10 has front-wheel drive, that space isn't cluttered with a drive shaft. You can use it all. There's plenty of legroom up front, too, because the F-10's engine is mounted sideways. There's nothing halfway about the F-10, it's a true family-sized station wagon.

The F-10 Wagon is a true automotive value, as well. Even though it's Datsun's lowest priced wagon it comes fully equipped with rear window defogger, tinted glass, whitewall tires, carpeting, chrome window trim, console and package tray, wheel covers, rustproof fender liners, heavy duty battery and bumper overriders. In short, all the things you'd expect to pay extra for on a car in this price range. All in all, about $500 worth of extra-value features.

Like all the F-10's, this new wagon gives you the fine traction and safe handling of front-wheel drive. And, the 1976 E.P.A. tests show that the rally-proven 1.4 litre engine delivers up to 40 m.p.g. in combined city/highway driving. But, this might vary depending on the way you drive.

Datsun fights rust.

The new F-10 is built with the latest anti-rust techniques and materials. It starts, even before the car is built, with Zincrometal, a corrosion resistant metal. We use it in critical places where rust is apt to strike, like rocker panels and suspension members. Then, as the F-10 is assembled, we go on to apply rust preventative compounds and water resistant sealers to more parts of the car than you may have imagined. Rust-proof plastic liners in the front wheel wells add even more protection. When we're through, the F-10 has one of Canada's most up-to-date and comprehensive rust protection treatments, and it's all included in the price of every F-10.

All this value is built into a smartly styled station wagon that's waiting for you right now at your nearest Datsun dealer. In this day of "stripped down" economy cars, the fully-equipped F-10 is one of the best values on the road. See it soon.

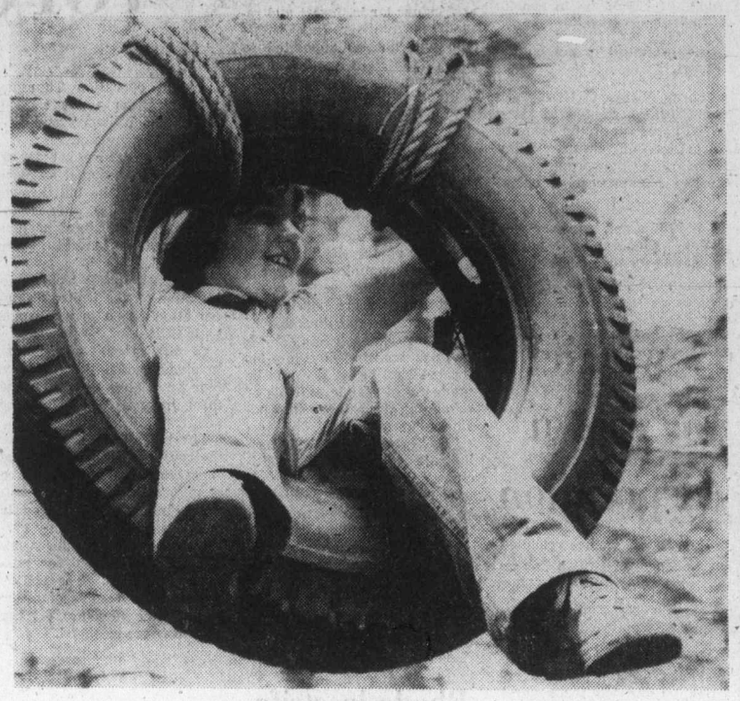
Clouds have sunny lining

It is no secret that Vancouver Island for years has been considered a summer paradise, for both young and old. And although this year's holiday season, which officially began Victoria Day weekend, has not been blessed with too much sunshine. Vancouver Island's young people have found time to have fun whenever the sun did peek out from behind thicker-than-usual-clouds. In the first picture at right, snapped by Bob Orrick of Parksville, unidentified youngster gets ride on old-tire swing during recent Cubs and Scouts jamboree held at Rathtrevor Beach Park at Parksville. And then there are the water activities, as photographed by Bill Smith of Victoria during an up-Island trip. Actually, the water activity as far as Peryl Cain, 3, of Miracle Beach is concerned, at the moment is confined to the old 'shall I or shan't I" dilemma. Young bather was testing the water in front of her home at Miracle Beach.



Chemainus ratepayers want estuary left alone

By CRAIG MEREDITH
Colonist Correspondent

DUNCAN — The preservation of the unique Chemainus River estuary, which has undergone little industrial or urban development to date, is being sought by a local citizens' group.

The Chemainus Ratepayers' Association is seeking support from local levels of government in the Cowichan Valley in order to present a brief to the provincial government requesting the legal establishment of ecological reserve status for the Chemainus estuary.

The Cowichan Valley Region Board has already supported the groups' request unanimously, while the municipality of North Cowichan, where the estuary is located, will consider the motion at the next meeting.

The Chemainus ratepayers have based their request on a report published in late January by the department of environment, which investigated the submerged river valley south of their community.

In conclusion, the 328-page report which also studied the Cowichan River estuary, stated "while it (Chemainus estuary) ranks high on the list of proposed ecological reserves, action should be taken to establish this status before other less conservation-oriented demands are placed on it.

The Chemainus river delta is currently being considered by the provincial government as one of a number of coastal ecological reserves in British Columbia.

The estuary itself is unique in that the growth of the river delta is influenced by the protective barrier of the Shoal islands, approximately one kilometre offshore, and the tidal currents of the Stuart Channel and Houstoun Passage.

The Chemainus delta, with a diversified ecology, the report said, supports a wide variety of fish, flora and wildlife and is relatively unaffected by man-made structures at this time.

The Crofton pulp and paper mill is the only major development in the area and it is located at the southern end of the delta on Osborn Bay.

The federal study indicates that the preservation of a major portion of this environment in its natural state would enable scientists to carry out research for future assessments of environmental and ecological impact of industrial and commercial development in the coastal area.

Pollution studies on the effect of the Crofton pulp and paper mill are currently being carried out as a joint undertaking of industry, government and universities.

Nanaimo school heavily burned

NANAIMO — Investigators from the provincial fire marshal's office in Vancouver and those from the Nanaimo fire department continued to probe what was left of the Bayview elementary school here Monlay, looking for the cause of a major fire there early Sunday.

City firemen were called to the blaze at about 3 a.m. Sunday by neighbors who smelled smoke. It took firemen about two hours to get the fire under control and another two hours to quell the last of the flames and mop up.

Two classrooms were completely destroyed and other classrooms, along with the administration area, were extensively damaged. The balance of the school suffered severe smoke and water damage.

District superintendent of schools, Doug Weicker, announced Monday that all classes, field trips and other activities connected with the school were cancelled until further notice.

District officials will be meeting later this week to decide on the future of the building and its function for the balance of the school term.

It is not known what caused the fire yet but officials said Monday that it appeared the blaze started accidentally, ruling out the possibility of arson.

There were no injuries and a damage estimate was not available.

Region considers St. Margaret site

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Valley Region Board is investigating the purchase of Queen Margaret's School here as a possible site for expanding hospital facilities.

At a recent meeting of the board, it was recommended that an architect be engaged to survey the present buildings with respect to their conversion to an intermediate-care facility.

The private girl's school, which was founded in 1921, occupies 26 acres across the road from the present Cowichan District Hospital on Gibbons Road, near the Duncan townsite.

It has been rumored for the past year that the school's board of directors was considering the sale of property and facilities, but this has not been confirmed until this time.

Regional board directors said the school was contemplating the acquisition of other property outside of Duncan, which would allow more space for the riding activities of the 160 girls attending the institution.

No price for the acreage in a prime residential area has been discussed publicly, but it is estimated to be in the $2-million bracket.

Inquiry pressed for time

NANAIMO — The Lindholm industrial inquiry commission, charged with bringing down a binding settlement in the school-civic labor dispute here, will require an extra week to 10 days to complete its work, commission chairman Louis Lindholm of Victoria said Monday.

The commission was appointed by Labor Minister Allan Williams to end the 10-week-old labor dispute here which tied up school, city and regional services and facilities.

Agreement was subsequently reached between the two sides in the dispute, resulting in the 700 workers going back to work.

The Mid-Island Public Employers' Association, bargaining agent for the employers, began its submission to the commission last week. When that submission is complete, probably this Wednesday, the Canadian Union of Public Employees will present its side and its terms of settlement.

Wool opens their eyes

COURTENAY — Creating a market for the province's sheepmen is the aim of a new industry which, without fanfare, opened its doors this month.

The Courtenay Carding Co., which hopes before long to employ about eight workers — two of them handicapped persons — is operating out of a building on Condensory Road.

People behind the new venture are Carl Goldscheider of Black Creek, Nick Sampson of Victoria and two persons from the Vancouver area who do not wish to be identified.

"We are hoping to create a market for Vancouver Island wool," Goldscheider said.

The Black Creek area sheep farmer hopes that as a result of the new venture, "we will be able to create a market not only for Vancouver Island wool, but also wool from all over the province."

His wife Margaret, who for the past three years has been custom-carding wool for the Cowichan Indian band, said she was excited at the possibilities the new venture could create.

Province gives navy league its due

NANAIMO — Highways and Public Works Minister Alex Fraser announced Monday that the provincial government will officially transfer a building on the new Malaspina College campus to the Navy League of Canada.

The building, which was part of the assets acquired by the province from the federal government in 1968, has been used for some years by the navy league.

Fraser said the action of the government "not only recognizes the work of the league, but also the many thousands of dollars which have been invested in the building in the public interest."

The minister said the league has performed a "most useful service" to the community and expressed the hope that the group would continue its activities in serving the youth of the area and of the province for many years to come.

Meanwhile, the volume of shipping through the port of Nanaimo remained steady last month, it has been disclosed in the Hub City.

The monthly statistics released Monday by the harbor commission here in Nanaimo show that a total of 24.8 million board feet of lumber was exported, with more than half, 13.1 million, going to Japan. U.S. Atlantic ports took 7.7 million board feet and other customers included Great Britain, continental Europe and Italy.

In addition, 35,623 short tons of pulp and 6,331 tons of newsprint were moved out through the port.

A total of 19 deep-sea vessels called here last month, and had a net tonnage total of 279,958 tons.

However, while this would indicate a strong recovery in the recently-slumping forest industries, knowledgeable sources have suggested the recovery has not been as robust as some have been hoping. The same sources, however, predict a bright future for the industry particularly the lumber sector.

Ney discovers new ideas during Habitat

NANAIMO — Zoning regulations and a spirit of independence on the part of Canadians probably result in a lower standard of care for senior citizens in this country than in many poverty-ridden developing countries.

Mayor Frank Ney made the statement Monday after attending a seminar on housing of senior citizens. Staged at Habitat in Vancouver last week.

The mayor said that one of the advantages that developing countries appear to have over the Western world is that family units remain together, thus providing the senior family members with someone to look after them, and with activities that keep them moving about.

"Here in Canada, there seems to be more of a spirit of independence and consequently, Canada has never really created enough facilities to fulfil the extraordinary demands for senior citizens' housing, particularly for those who are not in the best of health," he said.

One of the big problems here, the mayor said, is a zoning regulation which does not permit construction of separate cooking and plumbing facilities in the same household unless the lot is large enough to be zoned for a duplex.

Ney called on all goyernments to consider amending bylaws when they pertain to intra-family facilities, particularly as most senior citizens' housing is subsidized.

When families are able to stay together, he added, it not only helps to solve an otherwise-difficult problem — at the same time, it does so at no cost to the state.

'You take more, we'll take less'

Premiers shy over Trudeau tax offer

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau offered the provinces a financial arrangement Monday that he called "a new form of federalism," but the provincial premiers greeted it warily.

The proposal, the latest in 40 years of haggling over taxing and spending powers, is to make more room for the provinces to levy taxes while winding down direct Ottawa payments to shared-cost programs for health care and post-secondary education.

The leaders argued for three hours about equalization — a system expiring by law next March whereby Ottawa grants money to seven poorer provinces to increase their income to an agreed per-capita average. No agreement was reached on a replacement program, but they decided to take up the subject at a scheduled two-hour windup session of the full conference at 9:30 a.m. EDT today.

At the evening meeting, over a roast-lamb dinner, and afterwards, the premiers reported little progress among themselves on long-standing proposals for constitutional reform, but said it will be discussed again late this summer.

The provinces split along rich-poor lines, with Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia generally supporting the idea of more taxing power in place of federal-provincial dollar-matching for public services, while the other provinces worried about losing money on the deal.

The provinces were unanimous, however, in opposing a federal plan to end a five-year-old system of money transfers from Ottawa, known as revenue guarantees, to make up for any shortfall resulting from the 1971 overhaul of income-tax laws.

"A deal is a deal," said Ontario Premier William Davis in opposing retroactive withdrawal of the revenue-guarantee arrangement.

After 6½ hours in closed, full-dress conference, the premiers met in a working dinner session without aides at 24 Sussex Drive, the prime minister's residence, to talk casually about the continuing question of constitutional reform and the federal anti-inflation program.

Premier Frank Moores of Newfoundland headed home early, but John Crosby, his energy minister, sat in at the dinner.

Before the dinner, participants said they expected to wind up all matters of business during the dinner session. The conference was originally expected to last two days.

Finance ministers are to take up the issues of taxing powers, shared-cost programs and revenue guarantees in detail next month.

Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia said before the dinner that Ottawa "stonewalled the discussion" on reform of federal-provincial financial arrangements, which have been a perennial, active feature of Confederation since the 1930s.

But Trudeau said the aim is "a new form of federalism so the provinces can tax to meet their own needs."

This freedom to tax and spend according to their own priorities, instead of being constrained by the demands of federal-provincial programs in which costs are shared dollar for dollar, has been requested by some of the provinces, he said.

"We're saying: 'You do the taxing—you'll get the thanks for the money you spend and you'll get the blame for the taxes you raise'," said Trudeau.

After opening statements at the economic conference, several premiers told reporters

Stranded drivers attacked

CHICAGO (AP) — A motorist stranded on a dark, rain-soaked South Side street refused to pay $10 demanded by four youths, who then shot him and killed his wife. Police said the attack was one of a series of assaults on motorists stranded by torrential rains.

Three of the couple's six children watched the attack, which police said occurred in darkness Sunday night after heavy rains detoured motorists from the Dan Ryan expressway to unfamiliar streets on the South Side.

"That's the way it is down there," said Joseph DiLeonardi, city homicide commander. He said the youths were trying to "find a chance to stick somebody up."

There were reports of as many as 15 scattered attacks, but DiLeonardi said reports were filed only in four of the incidents involving 17 persons. Three persons were in hospital, one in serious condition.

There were no arrests and police said they could not estimate the number of youths involved in the series of attacks.

The slain woman was identified as Mrs. Phyllis Ann Anderson, 51, of Buffalo Grove—a northwest suburb. Her husband, Leo—editor of Telephony, a magazine for the communications industry—required surgery for his gunshot wounds and was listed in serious condition under intensive care. The three children in the car required treatment for cuts from broken glass.

Edward Rosen, 35, of Schererville, Ind., and his wife Judith had stopped in traffic when youths approached and demanded money.

When he refused, the youths struck him in the side of the face with an undetermined object and dragged him from his car. He was in fair condition with cuts and a broken jaw.

Premier laments changing scene

Happy times gone

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island, senior of the 11 government leaders in the country, says federal-provincial first ministers' conferences are not what they used to be.

B.C.'s Premier Bennett, junior member of the group with only six months at the job, says he is glad things are not as they used to be when his colorful father, W. A. C. Bennett, had a seat at the table.

"They're more like board of directors meetings now," says Campbell, 42, the man who has represented the island province for 10 years. "Before, they were a rather occasional and happy gathering."

"A board of directors' approach is necessary because we're running the country," says Bennett, 44, premier since Dec. 11.

"There has to be mutual trust on both sides. After all, we're working for the same taxpayers."

Campbell says conferences of a decade ago, involving such former premiers as Joey Smallwood of Newfoundland, Bennett and Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan, used to have more of "a sense of occasion."

"One looked forward to getting away and getting together," he says. "They were rare events then."

NDP chief takes seat

Cheers and humor welcome Barrett

David Barrett (NDP—Vancouver East) was escorted to his seat in the Legislature Monday by Alex Macdonald, also Vancouver East, and William King (NDP-Revelstoke.)

The public galleries erupted in applause as Barrett was taken to stand before the ceremonial mace to be officially welcomed to the house by Speaker Ed Smith.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy welcomed Barrett on behalf of Premier Bennett, in Ottawa for a first ministers' conference. King replied that he was gratified to find such a warm welcome from the government ranks which will "be in no way dissipated as the weeks roll by."

Liberal Gordon Gibson added his welcome with a touch of humor regarding former premier Barrett's "narrow" victory in the Vancouver-East byelection, a byelection won with more than 70 per cent of the popular vote.

And Conservative Scott Wallace congratulated Barrett on his "tremendous victory — it is vital that this house have a strong opposition."

Barrett thanked the house for the kind welcome and made one request: "When I give my maiden speech I ask that there be no heckling."

As the house chuckled Smith added a rare touch of humor with: "So ordered."

Last week in Penticton, Barrett said he intended to listen to his colleagues for a few days before taking part in debates.

Barrett was personally defeated in his former Coquitlam riding in the Dec. 11 provincial election.

'Go to hell,' Teamster boss tells would-be reformers

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Teamster president Frank Fitzsimmons told 2,300 delegates to the union convention Monday that those who want to reform the union should "go to hell."

Fitzsimmons' opening remarks to the 21st Teamster convention were directed almost entirely at dissidents and reporters who recently have printed allegations of corruption in the 2-million member union. He accused them of trying to "destroy" the Teamsters union.

"For those who say it is time we reform this union, who say it is time for the officers to stop selling out the members, I say to them — go to hell," Fitzsimmons declared.

"I will never allow any of those infiltrators into this organization until you, the delegates to this international union, by majority vote, vote to allow those who would destroy this organization to come into a place of prominence."

The Teamsters union has been under increased scrutiny in recent months by reformers, congressional investigators and federal agents exploring charges of financial corruption and the still unsolved disappearance of the teamsters ex-boss Jimmy Hoffa.

Labor Secretary W. J. Usery, who followed Fitzsimmons to the podium, was criticized by union reformers for appearing to put his "stamp of approval" on the union convention while the union is under investigation by the labor department for alleged pension fund abuses.

Rhodesia promoting blacks to officers

SALISBURY (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith announced plans Monday to advance blacks to officer rank in the armed forces of racially troubled Rhodesia.

Smith, speaking on the eve of a government report on race discrimination in his white-minority-ruled country, also said greater promotion prospects will be opened for blacks in the police force.

"This will cater for selected long-serving members in the ranks who have demonstrated marked qualities of leadership, professional ability and loyalty," Smith said in a radio and television broadcast.

United Press International

His delegate count growing by the hour, Jimmy Carter said Monday that the Democratic Party would enter the 1976 presidential campaign with "a harmonious party" for the first time in a decade.

Carter expressed confidence that the nomination was his, but assured a fundraising dinner in Dallas that the party "came out of the many primaries unscathed.

"I don't believe there are any open wounds left," he said. "We will arrive at the national convention with a harmonious party."

Carter stopped in Dallas enroute home to Georgia from New York city where he received an enthusiastic reception from the 274-member New York delegation.

Caucuses and state delegation meetings assured Carter of large blocs of delegates from New York, Connecticut and Missouri. Senator Frank Church released his 74 delegates and endorsed Carter, and Morris Udall said his delegates were free to back the Democratic frontrunner.

The latest UPI nationwide survey gave Carter 1,381 assured votes, just 124 short of the number needed for the Democratic nomination.

In the tight Republican contest, President Ford's aides said he would win enough delegates in upcoming conventions in Iowa, Minnesota, Connecticut and Delaware for a "commanding lead" over Ronald Reagan going into the GOP convention.

But the Ford campaign conceded Reagan would win most of the 31 delegates in Colorado and the 38 in Washington, and said North Dakota's 18 were "up for grabs."

Ford spokesman Peter Kaye said "we are reasonably confident" of Ford defeating Reagan for the nomination.

Ford has 984 delegates to 884 for Reagan, with 1,130 needed to nominate. There are 258 delegates yet to be picked, and with the struggle for the nomination going down to the wire, both Ford and Reagan actively wooed the 133 uncommitted GOP delegates.

With Carter assured of the nomination, there was wide speculation on his vice-presidential choice. Church said he had "no expectations one way or the other" on getting the nod, while Udall ruled himself out as a possibility.

"I think we have now approached the point where the outcome of our convention is fairly certain," Carter told the New York delegates. "In the presence of a very likely first ballot nomination, we must move to ensure party unity."

Carter gives victory sign

'I will never lie'

Jimmy: Charming, courteous —and difficult to understand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clearly, Jimmy Carter is the most infuriating candidate for president in years.

He came out of nowhere and now, 17 months later, stands at the brink of the Democratic nomination.

He is not easily understood and is impossible to pigeonhole. He is a white farmer from Georgia, who wins black votes north and south, a man whose father couldn't abide racial integration, whose mother could and did, loudly and publicly. He is a product of a tiny, claustrophobic town, with a single one-block business street.

He is a politician with the temerity, or the naivete, to say "I will never lie" to a country at the nadir of its trust. He is a highly intelligent man sophisticated in the ways of politics and image-making who says, nonetheless, when asked, that he was "born again in Christ." He is a Southerner, who may at last bury the Civil War, an intellectual, a liberal in many things, which makes him, according to one nasty view of Dixie, a minority within a minority within a minority.

He is the son of a compelling woman who joined the U.S. Peace Corps at the age of 67. He is a deeply religious Baptist, who still teaches Sunday school with Secret Service men in attendance, a Baptist whose beer-drinking brother goes to church only under forced draft, whose sister is an evangelist and faithhealer with a master's degree in psychology, whose second sister paints, rides a motorcycle and moves about with a free spirit in Plains, Ga., population 648.

James Earl Carter, Jr., insists on being called Jimmy, which is a misleading invitation to intimacy. He is not, off the platform, a man who invites that. He is charming, courteous, attentive and responsive but there is a circle within that remains curtained.

People who find mystery in Jimmy Carter mystify him. He does not shrink from questions and, to a recent interviewer who apologized for trying to probe the inner man, he said, "Help yourself."

"I am very careful about what I say," he said. "And I try to tell exactly what I think and I haven't tried to withhold anything."

"You don't regard yourself as particularly complicated?"

"No, I really don't. But I do have people come up to me and say I don't understand how you can like classic music and Dylan Thomas and Reinhold Neibuhr and also Bob Dylan, the Alman

Heart attack, injury cited in fireman pay case

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

The fireman, often pictured as a man of leisure, is actually facing a 50 per cent chance of job injury in any given year and may be running the risk of dying earlier than usual from heart disease.

This picture was presented Monday as the arbitration hearing of the Victoria local of the International Association of Firefighters entered its third day.

The 104 members of the local, trying to move toward parity with Vancouver firemen and those in numerous other B.C. centres, are seeking an 18 per cent wage increase in a one-year contract with the city.

According to earlier evidence, a fifth-year Victoria fireman earns $1,290 a month compared with $1,323 earned by his counterparts in Vancouver and Nanaimo.

Following up earlier evidence concerning the hazards faced by firemen, Saanich fireman Murray Bryden told the hearing Monday his department recorded 54 injury accidents over a 13-month period. This figure, he said, represented 61 per cent of the department's personnel.

The evidence was intended to show the situation was much the same as that established for Victoria and other departments throughout North America. Ross Cameron, president of the Victoria local, has said that, on a 12-month basis, accident figures represent about half the manpower of any department.

Under cross-examination by chief city negotiator Carl Anselm, Bryden couldn't say how many of the Saanich firemen required medical treatment or qualified for workers' compensation.

He did say, however, that accidents during the fighting of fires were "quite a common occurrence" and that a fireman had to be on constant guard against hazards "because he knows he could be injured at any given time."

Also introduced as evidence was a report by Dr. Dominick Davolos, associate professor of clinical medicine at the University of Cincinnati college of medicine, indicating firemen are more prone than others to heart and lung disease.

In his report, the doctor says evidence has reached the point where it "can no longer be ignored and there is a high degree of probability that the professional firefighter is at significant increased risk."

His report dealt only with American firemen and noted that New York State firemen have a life expectancy eight years less than the average male, mainly because of heart disease.

Davolos says extreme environmental, emotional and physical stresses are among the reasons for heart disease in firemen.

Lack of oxygen in fighting fires showed an effect on the hearts of otherwise healthy young firemen, the report says.

Anselm found it interesting that the doctor was medical adviser to the John P. Redmond Foundation of the International Association of Firefighters. He was unable to ascertain through questioning, whether the doctor might have been paid for his report.

The report was entered by Terry Erksine, who is attached to the Saanich fire department's heart unit — 16 first aid firemen who are qualified to detect various heart problems and administer necessary drugs.

The Victoria firemen want extra payment for men trained in first aid, although they do not operate ambulances like those in Saanich.

Mediator John Davie, who said Friday he didn't feel he could relate Vancouver pay rates to any award he may make in the Victoria case, told the hearing Monday he thought he had since discovered a means of doing so.

Anselm said he was "a little disturbed" by the remark and didn't feel the mediator should make any decision until all the evidence was completed. Davie assured him this wouldn't be the case, and while he might consider the Vancouver agreement, the Victoria award wouldn't necessarily be the same.

Oak Bay rezones land despite developer's suit

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

In spite of pending court action, Oak Bay council moved Monday night to amend zoning requirements for seven apartments in the Willows Beach area.

New regulations given hurried final reading decrease the site coverage allowed for two or three-storey buildings from 28 to 20 per cent, and allow only 10 units an acre.

A packed public hearing applauded council's efforts, but applicants for a building permit for one of the properties boycotted the hearing.

Monarch Holdings Ltd., which had caused the initial revival of the Willows Beach Association to protest further development in the area, has gone to court for delivery of a building permit.

In a letter to council, lawyer Allan Cox said the building permit application made to council April 20 was complete and in accordance with zoning bylaws.

"Under the circumstances our clients had no alternative but to instruct us to take proceedings in court to require the delivery of the permit to which they are entitled," the Cox letter said.

The letter noted that in June 1973, all existing apartment buildings were exempted from the single-family zoning which covers the rest of the area.

"In good faith our clients prepared at considerable expense their plans for development and applied for their permit as indicated above.

"Instead of issuing the permit, which our clients are entitled to under the existing zoning, you have introduced Bylaw 3148, the effect of which is obvious."

Cox claimed in his letter that the bylaw is specifically designed to negate Monarch Holdings' legal right to a building permit.

Council was inundated with 44 letters, 354 protest coupons and a 50-signature petition supporting preservation of the Willows Beach area.

And there was no shortage of speakers at the public hearing.

Willows Beach Association spokesman Richard Kilshaw said developers simply wanted their own way, with maximum profits.

"They want their pound of flesh, their long ton," he said.

He said the association had approached the developers to see if they would consider an offer from the association and other interested people to buy the property.

The developer was not interested in an offer, although it would have been made on the understanding that the property be turned over to the municipality for use as a park.

He said he felt the municipality along with the Capital Improvement District Commission and other government bodies, should consider purchasing the property.

The association, he said, was not prepared to sit by and watch the finest seashore in Greater Victoria sliced up piecemeal.

Support for his stand came from several speakers.

At issue was the rezoning of seven apartment properties.

Three years ago, when development threatened the area, council zoned the entire area down to single-family dwelling, leaving the existing apartment zoning with only the apartments already built.

In April Monarch Holdings applied for a permit to tear down Uplands Lodge on Thorpe Place and replace it with a new apartment block.

Victoria trustees favor system

Job choice via computer

Greater Victoria school trustees indicated Monday night they are interested in a computer counselling service.

Trustees agreed at a committee meeting to take two motions to next Monday's regular board meeting regarding counselling.

The first motion was to write letters to the provincial education department and the federal manpower and immigration department expressing interest in a computer program titled C.H.O.I.C.E.S.

The second motion was to find out what the costs would be to instal the system in junior and senior high schools.

C.H.O.I.C.E.S. is a computer-assisted counselling process developed by the manpower and immigration department's occupational and career analysis and development branch.

The system would store most or all of the 6,700 major job classifications, which could be further broken down into 22,000 specific jobs, and would be made available to students wishing to find what jobs are available.

Such information as wages, educational and physical requirements and employment potential would be provided after students program their questions into the computer.

The service would make the decision of picking a career far easier, the trustees were told.

The federal department undertook the task of providing more adequate occupational information and the result was the computerized C.H.O.I.C.E.S. program, which will be available to the Vancouver school district on a pilot-project basis in the spring of 1977.

If successful, the service would be made available to other districts in the fall.

All three school districts in the Victoria area, Greater Victoria, Saanich and Sooke, as well as Camosun College and the University of Victoria expressed interest in the project by attending a meeting on Dec. 4, 1975, at which a federal official stressed that good initial counselling was required as well as effective follow-up in the interpretation of the printout which counsellors and students receive.

Greater Victoria trustees were told Monday night that the cost of having a computer terminal in each school may reach $3,000 by the time the system is operational.

Move over

Dwarfing dockside neighbors Comox Queen and navy minesweeper, B.C. Ferries' Queen of Cowichan under construction at Yarrows Ltd., Esquimalt, prepares for endurance trials to test engines late this week. Capable of carrying 1,300 passengers and 362 vehicles, ship will be completed late this summer. Comox Queen, currently undergoing refit, belongs to highways department and runs between Comox and Powell River.

Village stores may be saved

Those four small stores on the southwest corner of Oak Bay Avenue and Monterey may not have to move after all, even if the Bank of Montreal is allowed to build on the site.

Council bubbles at tennis plan

A half-million-dollar project will give Oak Bay tennis players seven new courts, four of them under a "bubble."

Council decided Monday night to go ahead with the project in spite of the objections of Ald. Douglas McLelland who wondered if such a large sum of money should be spent in this way, at this time.

McLelland said a lot had been made of an expected $100,892 grant from the provincial recreation fund.

But, he said, council would have to pay $82,000 interest on a short-term loan for the project, making the grant worth approximately $19,000.

Although there is an agreement with the school board to build the courts, which will be adjacent to Oak Bay junior high school, he felt the board would understand the need for spending restraint.

Ald. Douglas Watts said irrecoverable money had already been spent on the project, which is the last of the planned recreation capital expenditures.

He felt council should follow through, and then sit back and concentrate on upkeep and maintenance.

The project includes a culvert for Bowker Creek, with the courts to be built over the culverted area.

Victoria Paving has won the contract and of the $500,000 total cost, $330,000 will go for four courts under a "bubble," a further three courts and parking for 40 cars.

Smith after funds for seawall plan

Mayor Brian Smith will be approaching the Capital Improvement District Commission next week to see if that body will foot the bill for a combined seawall and esplanade at Shoal Bay.

The plan, approved by Oak Bay council Monday night, calls for a westward extension of an existing seawall and esplanade from Oliver Street to the intersection of Beach Drive and King George Terrace at an estimated cost of $227,691.

A second-stage continuation of the proposal would take the wall to the Sunny Lane steps at an estimated cost of $221,349.

Ald. John Goult protested, saying he saw no need for concrete in the area.

Ald. Douglas Watts said the shore is muddy and subject to erosion.

Council was also told that consideration of a proposed sewage pumping station at the other end of the bay near McMicking Point should be deferred until July 6, at 5:15 p.m.

Ald. Shirley Dowell will be visiting municipal pumping stations in Seattle in the meanwhile to study the impact on residential areas.

Council received four letters about the station — three supporting the proposed site, and one opposing it.

Building delay approved

North Saanich council passed a resolution Monday aimed at holding up construction of the Sangster farm property at Mills Cross Road and West Saanich Road.

Building permits for the subdivision planned by Sav-More Builders Centre will be withheld for 30 days from the date they would otherwise be issued to give the municipal solicitors a chance to study the development's effects on North Saanich's community plan.

Solicitors have also been asked to report on the possibility of municipal control over well drilling and council's committee A will study ways to control the Sangster farm development.

On Monday night, Oak Bay council approved in principle an offer from builder Danclair Developments which would accommodate the stores, provide a new banking building, and go some way toward solving the parking problem.

Oak Bay had erupted in a furor over the proposed demolition of a dress store, meat market, bakery and grocery store to make way for a new bank building.

And council had been under pressure to ensure that the village maintained its character with small stores in easy reach of residents.

The latest proposal from Danclair is for alteration of the corner three stores so they could be occupied by a bank and dress store.

The meat market and bakery could be accommodated in the present Bank of Montreal building, leaving the grocery store.

Danclair, council was told, is prepared to enter negotiations for a satisfactory settlement of that question.

Since renovations would not provide required additional parking, Danclair is prepared to contribute up to $60,000 toward development of a municipal parking facility.

The matter has gone back to committee for consideration of a land-use contract for the project.

Esquimalt 'master plan'

Road-up pledge

Esquimalt residents may be able to say goodbye to the endless cutting up of their streets.

All service work requiring cuts in the pavement is to be done in conjunction with a proposed program for repaving throughout the municipality.

In a report to public works committee Monday, municipal engineer M. H. Campbell said he received support for co-ordination of projects from B.C. Hydro and B.C. Telephone.

The same report pointed out that sewer, water, gas and phone services cannot be placed in the same trench owing to potential health and safety problems.

The report was prepared after the committee became concerned over the number of pavement cuts made at various times for services, particularly as the municipality was implementing a repaving program.

Council has allotted almost $75,000 for repaving this year and the work is expected to start over the summer in the area's worst roads.

CUPE probe time limited

The Lindholm industrial inquiry commission, charged with bringing down a binding settlement in the school-civic labor dispute here, will require an extra week to 10 days to complete its work, commission chairman Louis Lindholm of Victoria said Monday.

Water query just a refresher

Sidney council voted Monday to give a friendly nudge to Hugh Curtis' memory.

Curtis, as provincial minister of municipal affairs, met with the mayors of Sidney, North Saanich, and Central Saanich about two months ago to discuss water problems on the Saanich Peninsula.

He promised the mayors then that he would arrange a meeting with representatives of the several Peninsula water boards to try to sort out those problems.

But so far, nothing has happened.

At its meeting Monday, Sidney council decided to remind Curtis of the promised meeting by asking him for the meeting date.

Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm is hoping Curtis will consolidate Peninsula water boards under one authority, or in some way wrest control of Peninsula water from Central Saanich, so a hook-up can be made with the Greater Victoria water board's supply.

He said he wants "the provincial government to do something because we can't do it ourselves." The three municipalities have, according to custom, been unable to agree, and they need someone "to smarten us up," he said.

He pointed to Campbell River and Nanaimo as precedents for provincial involvement.

The question of giving responsibility for Peninsula water to the Capital Region board has been tabled by that board's public works committee, and Malcolm told council he is in favor of letting it stay tabled.

Both the Greater Victoria water board and the public works committee seem to be opposed to regional influence in water matters, he said. He also feared that, if the question came out of committee and to the regional board, Curtis would feel obliged to wait until the board had acted before making any provincial moves.
